Reflections on beginning a leave of absence

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

Henry D. Weaver, provost, is the chief administrative officer during Lawrence Burkholder's leave.

December 21, 1976

On January 1, Harriet and I will head west for a six-month sabbatical. We plan to locate at the University of California at Berkeley and near the Graduate Theological Union.

Sabbaticals for teaching faculty are traditional but sabbaticals for presidents are rare. I suppose it depends upon the conception of the college presidency. If the presidency is conceived primarily in terms of control and maintenance, analogous to the management of business enterprises, then presidents need nothing more than an occasional seminar on administration at, say, the Harvard Business School. If, however, the presidency is conceived in terms of intellectual leadership in the traditions of the teacher and the philosopher of the liberal arts, then presidents need extended periods of time to ponder their deepest thoughts on a wide range of subjects.

I am hoping to spend these months pursuing several major problems. They are not related directly to the college but they are issues which intrigue me and are of general interest. I plan to write a number of articles on Christian ethics in which I hope to take up some of the practical ethical problems facing the Mennonite Church. It is my view that the Mennonite Church has entered a new period of involvement in, and responsibility for, society, for which the ethical formulations of the past are no longer entirely satisfactory. What I hope to do is to summarize and extend my doctoral thesis of 1958 on the ethical implications of social responsibility and institutional involvement.

Another of my concerns is the theological meaning of China. During my visit to China two years ago, I was impressed by analogies between Chinese Marxism and Christianity. I observed that the leaders of the "New China" have organized some 900 million people according to principles which seem strangely "Christian." Although China is officially atheist, the motivation and morality and community life of the people resemble Christian idealism. "Serve the neighbor" is the most characteristic slogan and the organizing principle of society.

Obviously there are elements of Chinese life and ideology which are diametrically opposed to Christianity and yet the analogies are so impressive that the question is bound to be raised as to whether God may be accomplishing something among them of significance. My purpose is to ponder this question and write an extended essay which I will present at a meeting of the North American Consultation on China at the University of Notre Dame in June. This conference will bring together China experts and theologians under the auspices of the National Council of Churches.

Now for a confession. I plan also to fish for salmon in British Columbia, trout in Wyoming, and kingfish in Belize. To me fishing with a fly is a "metaphysical" experience. The stream is a symbol of infinity. When a trout surfaces for a fly it suggests the movement from "essence" to "ex-istence." Enough of that medieval philosophy . . . .

As for the normal operation of the college, there is no reason to be concerned. The college administration is considerably decentralized anyway. But of course final responsibility must be lodged with a "chief administrative officer." This will be Henry Weaver, provost. Henry has been a member of the faculty since 1957 and provost since 1971. As provost he has assumed many routine administrative responsibilities and he has been active in planning during a time when control is a major factor in the health of the institution. He is well prepared for this responsibility.

Workshop for poets set for Feb. 25-27

If you are serious about writing poetry, there are at least three reasons why you should attend the Goshen College Writers' Workshop on Poetry, Feb. 25-27.

1. The major guest speaker of the workshop is an international poet of the Mennonite Church. He is Yorifumi Yaguchi, a graduate of Goshen Biblical Seminary and editor of Poetry Nippon, Japan's foremost publication for Japanese poetry written in English.

2. Few congregations have supported persons who have the gift to write poetry. As a result, many keep their poems hidden in notebooks or diaries. Workshop speakers will offer insights on how to refine poetry and how to develop ideas in poetic form.

3. The workshop can be a service to those who submit, or want to submit, poetry for publication in denominational papers.

Two more guest poets

In addition to Yaguchi, poets Peter Fallon and Nick Lindsay will also be speaking to workshop participants. Both have published widely. Fallon is a poet from Ireland and founder of Gallery Press. Lindsay is poet-in-residence at GC currently on Edisto Island, South Carolina, to continue his project to preserve that community's oral tradition.

Each guest poet will read poetry and speak on some aspect of poetry creation. During three workshop periods on Feb. 26 Fallon will center on metrics, Yaguchi on imagery, and Lindsay on shape.

Two special speakers

Two special speakers will be Mary Eleanor Bender, GC professor of French and teacher of Literature and Twentieth-century Thought; and Robert Price, psychiatrist at Oaklawn Community Mental Health Center, Elkhart, and musician and informal student of Hebrew poetry and liturgy.

Miss Bender will open the workshop Friday at 7 p.m. with a perspective titled "Poetry as Incarnation." Price will speak and perform Sunday morning in a session titled "Recreating Isaiah Through Cantilation (54:7-8)."

The workshop will close at noon Sunday after a poetry-reading hour by the poet-participants.

Low registration fee

Required for workshop registration are (1) a page of poems by the registrant which can be used as works-in-progress in the workshop sessions, and (2) $15 registration fee. College students from other campuses pay the special lower fee of $5.

The workshop is in response to the enthusiasm by writers who attended the 1975 writers' conference on campus and who requested another one. Co-sponsors are the department of English and the Center for Discipleship.

More information and details about lodging and meals are available by writing to Art Smoker, Center for Discipleship, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526, or Ervin Beck, Department of English, GC.

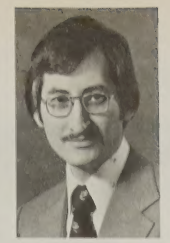
'Festival of the people' centers on life of congregation



John D. Yoder, a member of the Campus Ministries Team, is coordinator, Festival of the People.

By John D. Yoder

A "Festival of the People" will be held at Goshen College April 1-3, 1977. Its purpose is to affirm the congregation as a viable yet changing expression of the people of God, and to celebrate the teaching and sharing aspects of congregational life occasioned by the publication of the new Foundation Series curriculum.

The Festival will bring together pastors, parents, youth, children, teachers, writers, and editors from Brethren in Christ, Church of the Brethren, General Conference Mennonite, and Mennonite churches of the Midwest who are actively involved in Christian education, music, drama, preaching, small groups, church leadership, youth activities, and worship.

Planning committee for the Festival includes Goshen faculty members Beth Berry, Mary Oyer, Stuart Showalter, Roy Umble, June Yoder, and John D. Yoder, Festival coordinator, as well as Sue Briner, from Church of the Brethren, Hedy Sawadsky from General Conference Mennonite Church, and John Arthur Brubaker from Brethren in Christ Church.

Each of the four public sessions will focus on an aspect of worship: preaching, teaching, interpreting, and singing. Donovan Smucker of Conrad Grebel College will deliver the opening address, "The People of God," Friday evening. Paul Lederach, executive director for The Foundation Series, will speak Saturday morning on the significance of the new curriculum for the nurture of children in the believers church tradition. Roy Umble and June Yoder are planning a drama for Saturday evening. The Festival will conclude with a hymnsing and worship led by Mary Oyer.

Saturday workshops will look at the unique potential of the congregation for transmitting and nurturing Christian faith. Topics include new forms of congregational leadership, forming and nurturing small groups, developing consensus in congregational decision-making, the role of women in the congregation, the contributions youth can make in the congregation, the meaning of church membership and discipline, how to study the Bible, and congregational libraries as learning resource centers.

Several workshops will emphasize teaching methods, using The Foundation Series as a resource: the role of modeling in teaching, the use of story as content and method, writing objectives and developing lesson plans, how to ask helpful questions and lead a class discussion. Separate workshops will highlight art, drama, and music in The Foundation Series.

There will also be special workshops for children from age 3 to 13 where they can see puppet shows, drama, movies, and hear stories and then construct puppets, work with art materials, or take part in drama, choral reading, music, or video taping.

An important aspect of the Festival will be the introduction of The Foundation Series curriculum, an event Paul Lederach calls "the publishing event of our generation." This graded Sunday-school material for children age three through Grade 8 is a bold attempt on the part of the four cooperating denominations to help adults, committed to a biblical, Anabaptist, believers church stance, share their faith with children in the midst of the congregation and to make the process of Christian education exciting, experiential, and enjoyable. The title, Foundation Series, comes from I Corinthians 3:11: "For no other foundation can anyone lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

For further information on the Festival, contact the Festival of the People Office, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

A mini-SST in Honduras

Goshen College
international education department and the alumni office announce another
mini-SST for alumni and friends.

Robert and Dorothy Yoder

* Summer 1978
* Ten days in Spanish-speaking Honduras
* Prof. Robert Yoder and his wife Dorothy, who directed three Study-Service Trimesters in Honduras, will lead this continuing education experience.
* More details in the next Bulletin. If interested, write Alumni Director Alice Roth, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

What is SST good for?

By J. Howard and Verda Kauffman, SST leaders in Belize, 1974-75

J. Howard and Verda Kauffman

"You can spot an American tourist in Belize a mile off. He's the guy who is white (or red and peeling), wears a hat or has long hair, talks only to fellow whites who obviously came along with him, doesn't even look at other people (even me, a fellow WASP), and looks like he owns the town."

With these words, one Goshen College student expressed her new-found awareness of the "ugly American," the ubiquitous tourist whose presence so many Europeans and Asians have long tolerated because somehow they made a contribution to their nation's economic well-being. It is no wonder SST students soon learn to put a little distance between themselves and ordinary tourists who show up in Haiti, Costa Rica, Belize, or wherever SST units are located.

SST provides many learnings, both for the students and for the faculty members who lead the units. If we were to attempt to catalog all the things that may have been gained by all the GC students and teachers who have participated in SST in the past ten years, there would be a long list! There would also be some surprises!

Objectives

The college catalog says that it is the purpose of SST to "examine and experience the culture of a developing and/or significantly different country . . . (To) get the understanding necessary to live and work effectively in a world made smaller by transportation and communication facilities."

These objectives are certainly well met. Some students get off the jet plane from Miami with considerable self-confidence (soon to be shaken) that they can hack it. Others find their knees shaking, and not just because of the trade winds blowing mercifully from the Caribbean Sea! Suddenly the full force of the humid tropical climate, and the unfamiliar sights, sounds, and smells fill one's eyes, ears, nose, and stomach. A few begin to wonder, "Why did I ever come down here?"

The motto of SST might well be "Nothing ventured, nothing gained." It is truly a venture, and there are lots of gains, even by those few who weren't sure they wanted to gain anything beyond 12 hours of college credit.

Initial excitement

The excitement of the new adventure usually carries everyone through the first several weeks. There's the new home and family to get used to, the changed pace of life (slow down!), the mosquitos, the barking dogs at 5 a.m., the noisy trucks charging past your front door, and people — streets full of them. There are also the beauties of nature, and of human nature. Beyond those strange and friendly faces are kindly persons one can get to know.

Everyone has at least some culture shock. The only difference is between those who admit it and those who don't.

It may take a student six weeks to recognize what is happening. One wrote, "Today I realize that somewhere between January 11 and February 19, I had finally gotten used to Belizean food. After meals I am actually satisfied; I don't still crave food from the States after I am done eating. I don't think about food as much as I used to, or dream of Big Macs and McDonaldland cookies."

The unusual learnings

It is not the purpose of the author to review the usual things that students are expected to learn while on SST, but rather to point out some of the unusual learnings — the kinds of things that don't appear in books and lectures, the kinds of things you can't program (or even expect) ahead of time. And the students will tell it in their own words. For example, one fellow discovered how important one's manner of dress is to people:

"Today I talked to my roommate (a 17-year-old Belizean) about the dress code of Belize. He told me what I was wearing was very poor for Belize. He said my pants weren't pressed properly and my shirt had a hole in it. He told me my hair was clean, but no girl would want to go out with me because of its length. In all he told me that I wasn't dressing up to Belizean standards."

One student noted the difficulty of learning how to protect his health without hurting his host's feelings: "This morning I listened to advice given on watching the water we drink. We were told to be careful of drinking it and at the same time not to hurt people's feelings. If a foreign student didn't eat some food at my house or drink my water at home for some health reason, I think I would feel insulted, too. It would make me appear unsanitary, backwards, and perhaps even lowly. I think I have to watch out that in protecting myself I don't make someone think that I'm snubbing him."

Old values in a new setting

Being in a different environment reminds one of the values often taken for granted in the home setting. Here are two testimonies:

"One thing I think God is teaching me through SST is to be more thankful for the ordinary things in life I've always taken for granted — lots of fresh water, fresh air, a nice home, Christian parents who love me, good educational opportunities, a good job, etc. I just hope I don't forget the lessons I've learned when I go back to the States and those things are all available again."

"I'm anxious to bake and cook again. I never spent that much time in a kitchen, but enough that I miss being able to make something on my own. It makes me appreciate Mom's fully stocked cupboards, and all her different bowls and dishes. Also electric mixers, blenders, toasters, etc. It goes to show, I guess, how much we take for granted in the States."

But the "abundance of things" may come to seem less important in the scale of life's values: "When we first arrived in Belize, I wanted to take pictures of the poor conditions, but it no longer seems strange or unusual to me. I think the biggest idea I have gained from SST is that people can be happy with a lot less than I'm used to. I think after this experience it will be easier for me to do without articles I once thought were necessities."

One student found that SST helped her to discover and deal with her prejudice. She wrote: "During my SST experience I've had a chance to relate to people from various ethnic groups. I don't think I was exactly prejudiced before SST. Like on campus, for example, I was a bit stand-offish with the foreign students because I was rarely around them. I guess I was somewhat afraid of them. But SST has really changed my attitudes. Now that I've had a chance to associate with them, I've really come to realize that they are just like me. We are all equal. What does it profit a person to be prejudiced? Just like any ethnic group, there are the good and the bad. It's not fair for a person to stereotype a group because he's run into a few people from that group that weren't so good."

Confronting need

On SST, world needs take on a greater degree of reality than one realizes from merely reading about them in magazines and church papers. A student reports:

"SST has shown me areas of need in Belize, which are probably representative of world-wide needs, and therefore made me more aware of how I can help to alleviate those needs. When I start working, I really want to give a greater part of my income to relief work and missions, perhaps through the church and MCC."

How does one learn to deal with the frustrations of living in a different culture? Here, too, experience helps more than books, as one student witnesses:

"Well, here I sit writing by flashlight because our electricity is off. I guess that's just another symptom of underdevelopment—the inability to provide all the services the people need. Frustration!"

Appreciation for their religious heritage

Students sometimes find that God's presence can be realized in new and different settings:

"I went to two churches today, Ebenezer Methodist in the morning and St. John's Anglican in the evening. Ebenezer was a poor church, not too many people came, but they were informal and friendly. At St. John's no one was talking before the service like at Ebenezer. It was a quieter, more dignified mood, but it wasn't stuffy and fakey. I enjoyed both services very much. Both had a lot of 'ritual.' This was something Mennonites never cared for too much; it was something for the Catholics. But somehow it expressed a kind of reverence for God in the service. It was a nice feeling."

When they get farther away from home, students sometimes begin to understand better and appreciate their religious heritage:

"Because I have time to think, I can work out a lot of ideas, and question others. Like today, I was discussing Mennonites with a guy. I realize I should know more about them, especially since I'm one and am beginning to really appreciate that fact."

Realities that shock

The service experience of the last six weeks of the SST period brings students face to face with the realities of life, some of which can be a bit shocking. A nursing student, working in a clinic in Belize City, wrote:

"Somehow I got the strangest feeling when a girl almost exactly my age (24) came in midway through her seventh pregnancy. For a minute I was so stunned, I couldn't think straight. Try as I might, I could not picture myself having six children right now and expecting another. That blows my mind. She looked much older than her age, but she's probably known a lot of problems and heartaches that I can't even imagine."

The strength of the group

SST is also a rather intensive group experience, which has possibilities for considerable frustration and also great benefit. It takes a Christian commitment and considerable interpersonal trust to make this experience come off in a good way. The keen insights of one student highlight the dynamics of the group process:

"Tonight we had a really good time of sharing together at our worship meeting. I was reminded again of the greatness of our God, how He can take 21 very different students, a prof and his wife, throw us together in a strange, new culture for 13 weeks, and not have the whole situation explode! That seems to me to be a miracle."

The same student continues: "God has also shown me again through the people in our group that it is useless to worry. I worried before I came down here that there wouldn't be many Christians in our group to have times of sharing with. Oh, I knew a few of the kids beforehand and that they were Christians, but that was all. Wow, it was so neat to discover all the Christians among us! That has been one of the most important things to me on SST."

One girl, working as a teacher aide in a schoolroom full of Spanish-speaking elementary school children, expressed sentiments that probably speak for a lot of the more than 2,000 students who have been on SST location. She wrote:

"I thought about a lot of things, but mainly how fast service seems to be going and in four weeks it will all be over. I'm learning so much here about teaching, relating to people, and especially about myself. I feel like I'm really maturing, and to new situations especially. IN ALL THINGS GIVE THANKS."

Eleven meetings hosted by alumni

It was a first-time-ever occasion when alumni gathered in Minneapolis on December 29 for a dinner meeting with GC's president, J. Lawrence Burkholder. Enroute to his study sabbatical in California Burkholder met with seven western alumni groups.

Invitations had been sent to 45 alumni in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. Hosts Kim '74 and Ellen Hernley '68 Swanson report "a small and enthusiastic group" of persons at the dinner meeting, in spite of holiday schedule conflicts.

Several parents of students and two prospective students were among the 80 Denver area persons meeting with President Burkholder on January 4. Allen Martin '57 and Ralph Imhoff '64 hosted this meeting.

Frank and Mary Jones '35 Miller hosted a January 7 meeting in their Boise, Idaho, home. In spite of snow and zero temperatures, 25 alumni and friends gathered to visit with President and Mrs. Burkholder.

In Seattle, Wash., Janet Burkholder Friesen '74 coordinated plans for the January 10 meeting. GC alumni files show 38 alumni in the Seattle area; the 20 persons at the meeting found "some expected friends and some unexpected ones."

More than 90 alumni and friends gathered at the Hesston, Kans., Colonial House for a January 11 meeting hosted by James and Jan Yousey '70 Diller and Junior '71 and Carolyn Yousey '69 Kauffman. Burkholder was in Kansas for a Bethel College seminar on China.

One participant at the Salem, Oreg., meeting, held January 17, reported that "Burkholder tells it like it is, and I like that." The 55 people at this meeting elected Bernard Showalter '51 as new vice-president for GC alumni activities in the area, and Ruby Shetler '75 as secretary-treasurer; Marion Schrock '55 replaced Amos Conrad '51 as president.

Burkholder concluded this series of meetings on January 27 when he met with GC alumni and friends in Phoenix, Ariz. Ramona A. Yoder '70 was coordinator for this event.

The first GC gathering for the Kitchener, Ontario, area was coordinated by James Wideman, member of the GC Board of Overseers. Alumni and friends were invited to a reception with the GC Chamber Choir following its program at Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church in Kitchener on February 17.

Prof. Roy Umble and a group of students were scheduled for presentations to Youngstown, Ohio, area alumni on February 17 and to Wayne County, Ohio, alumni on February 19.

Greg Bowman '74 hosted the Youngstown area meeting, held at Midway Mennonite Church in Columbiana. The Wayne County dinner meeting held at Oak Grove Mennonite Church in Smithville was planned by David '63 and Geneva Steiner '60 Smucker and Milton '61 and Ann Sommer '60 Troyer.

Alumni wrote it

I have made the commitment to work toward not paying my federal taxes because of the military uses, and I will likely need to reduce my income beginning this January. . . . A drawback from going on a reduced income is the reality that most of one's earnings are used for living expenses, and financial contributions and donations do not occur. I, however, feel that contribution can be as significant as any monetary contribution. I hope that GC administration and fund earner people can understand and affirm such a stance and lifestyle. I think that sometimes in the fund-raising and alumni staff, alternate non-money-producing lifestyles are excluded. It's assumed that everyone is earning all sorts of extra money. . . . I still struggle with the issue of wanting to see institutions and programs continue while I may be on a subsistence salary and may not be contributing financially. I'll keep thinking about it.

Name withheld

I would feel a bit more inclined to contribute to GC if a list of the contributors were not posted in the Bulletin. I can't quite see the purpose of publishing names of contributors, especially if it's a scheme to raise more money.

Name withheld

The Purists and Publicans continue their squabble
The dancers haven't yet found the right way to hobble
Consistency seems much too difficult to bear
I trust that the constituency still continues to care.
Peace.
Shalom.
Bite the bullet.

I'd like to see a subscription blank for the GC Record in the Bulletin. I never have a chance to subscribe. This might help the fellow that wants to know about choir tours, etc. He could read about upcoming events in the Record.

Myron L. '70 and Martha Yoder '70 Graber
Kalona, IA

We appreciate very much the work of the college and what it has done in the past for the Mennonite Church, what it is doing now, and what we know it will do in the future. . . . Time and again we have seen what the college has done for individual students and in turn how those students have blessed the church. . . . We feel that GC has a much stronger influence on the church at large than most people are aware of. The college meant a great deal to me and my wife, as well as several of our children. We will always feel we owe this college a debt of support and love for what we personally experienced while attending school there.

My special greetings to all international students. I still remember the good times we used to have during international student functions. Indeed, due to its Christian commitment and concern, GC has established and fostered good international relationships.

Two alumni missing in Ecuador

James Herschberger '70 and Delilah Yoder '69 have been mysteriously missing in Ecuador, South America, since May, 1976.

An in-depth story in Newsday, a daily serving Long Island, New York, plus a report from Jim's mother, Mrs. Harvey Herschberger, of Hatfield, PA, both ask for information on the whereabouts or contacts of the two North American tourists.

The family of Delilah Yoder says it has spent $50,000 and sent private detectives to Ecuador twice to search for her and Herschberger.

The U.S. State Department had informed the families it had no power to investigate the cases but it did report rumors. One rumor was that the couple had been beheaded. Another rumor, also later retracted, was that they were held hostage by Indians and helicopters were going in to rescue them.

The search for the couple focuses on the town of Banos and the province of Azuay, nestled high in the Andes Mountains with dense jungles tucked below. According to news media, it is the same area in which five missionaries were killed by Indians a few years ago, in which jungle narcotics are sold to strangers for pennies and in which real human shrunken heads sell for up to $300 apiece.

Also, two other tourists disappeared in this area within a year. They were Jane Bissell, of Northport, Long Island, NY, an experienced explorer, nurse, physical therapist and former Peace Corps worker in Malaysia, who is listed as missing, and Stephen Bohn, of Baker, OR, a diabetic who died, according to the Ecuadorian death certificate, of presumptive diabetic coma.

Herschberger, 27, 6-foot-3 with light brown hair and blue eyes, was a computer systems engineer and experienced outdoorsman. Yoder, 27, 5-foot-5, with brown hair and eyes, was a social worker in Arlington, VA.

If you teach piano, you're invited to a five-day workshop

Louise Goss is general editor and co-author of the Frances Clark Library for Piano Students.

Goshen College's department of music will sponsor a five-day workshop for piano teachers, on campus, June 20-24. Director of the workshop will be John O'Brien; featured teacher will be Louise Goss, co-author of the Frances Clark Library for Piano Students.

Faculty and high lights of the week will be:

Louise Goss will speak on "Group and Private Study — Elementary and Intermediate": Right, from the start. Watch on videorape as the beginner moves through elementary into intermediate level . . . ways to insure the pupil's success from the start . . . ways to avoid problems later on.

She will also speak on "The Older Beginner": It's never too late to begin. A fresh, new approach designed to help the teacher meet the needs, abilities and interests of the older or adult beginner. These sessions will highlight a new adult beginner's book and how to use it.

John O'Brien, consultant to The Frances Clark Piano Library and GC piano pedagogy professor, will speak on "Preparation for College." He will explore experiences with music that the elementary, intermediate and advanced pre-college student must have to interpret, perform and project repertoire at the college level.

Kathryn Sherer '54, GC music professor and instructor in the piano preparatory department, will give a lecture-recital of new teaching materials. Veronica Roth '69 will conduct the workshop's student program.

The student program will include classes in ensemble playing, performance styles and coaching sessions.

More information and details on tuition, room and board, and college credit for the workshop may be obtained from John O'Brien, Department of Music, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

The 1977 workshop is the seventh annual workshop to be held at GC.

If you want graduate credit in marine biology, come to GC

Field experience in marine biology (Biology 408) at Layton City in the Florida Keys will be offered June 15-29 under the direction of C. F. Bishop and Jonathan N. Roth, professors of biology.

This session is designed especially for the elementary teacher who is interested in some practical science field experience and would like graduate credit, granted by Ball State U.

It is also open to college students who desire three hours of upper-level credit in a field biology course.

The session is an extension of the annual marine biology course offered for the past 10 years to GC students. Enrollment is limited.

More information is available from J. N. Roth, Department of Biology, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Looking ahead to June, 1978, Roth is planning a non-credit marine biology learning-vacation week for families, similar to the ones in 1976, next year.

HIGH LIGHT INSIDE:

What is SST good for? By J. Howard and Verda Kauffman, Page 2

Is "1,000 more" a realistic goal?

Comments by Stanley W. Boyer, chairman of the 1977 Alumni Fund

One of the annual fund goals this year is to involve 1,000 more alumni participants than last year. Unrealistic? A big bite at least.

It looks especially challenging in light of the mid-year fund report: The number of alumni contributors totaled 1,714 this December 31 (mid-fund year) compared to 1,980 at that time last year.

To reach the "1,000 more" goal, more than 100 volunteers will attempt to phone 4,000 GC alumni in the April 18-29 phonothon. Last year 3,511 alumni contributed to the Annual Fund for Quality Teaching. This year's goal calls for raising that total from 26 percent of the GC alumni to 32 percent, or 4,511 alumni contributions. The enlarged phonothon is geared toward this goal.

Alumni gifts up at midyear

The good news about this year's mid-year fund report is that although fewer alumni have contributed, the dollar total on December 31 stood at $168,774. This compares with a mid-year total last year of $140,046.

This year's increased amount includes a special "motivator" challenge fund, made up of increased gifts and pledges from regular alumni contributors. In the phonothon, gifts from alumni who did not contribute to last year's fund will release an amount of the "motivator" gifts and pledges.

The rationale for the goal

Why set a goal of 1,000 more alumni contributors? Because GC needs every alumnus' help in the $1,000 subsidy required for each student. (Alumni gifts should account for one-third of the $1,016,000 which GC needs in contributed funds this year).

In addition, foundations and corporations consider alumni involvement a crucial factor in deciding to award grants. And finally, because GC faculty and administrators lean heavily on the counsel and encouragement of involved alumni.

Yes, "1,000 more" is a big goal. It requires the participation of all alumni. Big causes call for big goals, and the fund committee assumes a large pool of alumni good will and support for this cause—maintaining quality teaching at Goshen College.

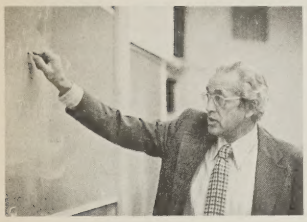
The faith dimension

By Henry D. Weaver



Henry D. Weaver is provost and professor of chemistry. He has been on the faculty since 1957.

How does a student or any other young person develop faith? What are the things that can be done to assist him or her in the struggle? We believe that this dimension of development is the overriding reason for having a church college like Goshen.

Currently we are in the process of reexamining the expectations we have for a graduate of Goshen College. We are at the stage in which different people are listing the characteristics they want to see develop. In many respects the list includes the hopes of any good college or university. It lists academic goals: Communication skills, a perspective of history, an acquaintance with the major modes of inquiry in different disciplines, an acquaintance with the major spheres of learning, mastery of a specific discipline. . . . The list includes personal development goals: A sense of self-worth and self-identity, the skill to handle stress and rapid changes, the choice of a vocation, self-confidence, the capacity to feel and express emotion. . . .

But this list includes another kind of desire for students: Development of gifts for use in the congregation and denomination, personal faith, values based on peace, love and justice, moral values based on Christian faith. . . . It is a different starting point and it makes a vital difference in the program, the people employed on the faculty and the total milieu of life on campus.

In helping a student develop, professors constantly are confronting students. The process is sometimes painful, but the outcome is frequently a source of deep satisfaction to both the student and professor. The confrontations include presenting new ideas in the professor's discipline, critiquing the student's understandings and test results, as well as dealing with problems of self-identity and faith.

At Goshen all the teachers are Christians. The way their faith affects their teaching varies with the discipline — or the occasion. In philosophy, for example, the material involves direct discussion of issues. In chemistry the underlying assumptions are frequently different from those of a teacher who is not a Christian. Faculty interact with students as coaches of athletic teams, directors of choirs and plays, and in other extracurricular events. Intense interaction occurs on SST, in direct counseling and in laboratories, seminars and small junior- and senior-level classes.

We think the faith dimension is the unique virtue of Goshen College.

Higher education . . . and God's plan for me

By Becky Stoltzfus

Becky Stoltzfus, a junior from Iowa City, Iowa, is majoring in elementary education. She plays violin in the college orchestra.

In September, 1974, I entered Goshen College. Just out of a Mennonite high school in Iowa, I wanted a liberal arts college education in a Mennonite setting. Since then, my academic experience has been a movement back and forth between the homogeneous Christian setting at Goshen and the secular settings of SST in Honduras and one semester at the University of Iowa. The opportunities in each of these experiences have made important contributions to my education and my understanding of the Christian faith.

As a freshman I hit it off with exciting classes, and exciting relationships with new friends. Both "happened" to me in the atmosphere of commitment to a Christian search and faith which I found here on the Goshen campus.

Then came SST and Honduras. My world expanded and familiar intellectual walls cracked and split open a bit from my experiences with exhausting poverty, oppressive political pressures and brewing violence among the people.

New questions crowded my mind. What am I doing in college? How is the study of the liberal arts in the comfortable library carrells related to the serious social problems of Honduras? How is my faith as a Christian related to both these questions? What are my own rock bottom values? What do I want to do vocationally?

I returned to the Goshen campus with a greater seriousness. And sure enough, I found teachers and other students asking similar questions and ahead of me with their answers.

For me, Goshen's efforts to bring together the realities of our hurting world, our cultural traditions in the liberal arts and the Christian faith were helpful. How?

Classes do it, chapel/convocations help, on and off campus living patterns, eating and studying together contribute; my involvement in the Assembly congregation was meaningful. The whole combination encouraged me to develop my own values and ideas about the church as an alternative social grouping within the larger world around me.

But I wanted a change for awhile. What would a secular campus be like? Also, I wanted to live at home, so I registered at the University of Iowa in Iowa City last fall.

The University of Iowa did not pretend to be a Christian community. There was no attempt to relate the Christian faith to studies. Yet within this setting I had a good learning experience. There was a broader choice of academic subjects and more complete and varied learning resources available. The profs were strong, well-trained in their fields, carried lighter class loads and taught with concern for humanitarian values.

The integration of academic studies with faith was not attempted at the University of Iowa, but the relation of the two in my life became clearer. Interaction with the wider diversity and variety of people I met made me reflect deeper into my values and faith. In fact, I was challenged to expand my own Christian view of the world in relation to those who held other views. My classes in elementary education, anthropology and history were stimulating to me partly because my approach was somewhat different from many around me. Within this situation the Witmarsum Fellowship in the First Mennonite Church at Iowa City helped me reflect on the relation of the Christian belief to the liberal arts.

Goshen College, SST and the University of Iowa have been three distinctly different learning situations. They have each contributed in unique ways to my academic experience and understandings of the Christian faith. People experiences in academic settings both within and outside the Christian community are helping me discover who I am, and what my faith is and can become. Higher education helps me develop my gifts as a contributing person within God's plan. The more I have been able to relate my classes to this end the more full and enthusiastic has been my participation in my studies.

The power of a hero to make changes

By June Alliman '67 Yoder

Almost all children have heroes. That hero might be Superman or Spiderman, Mr. Rogers or Grandma, or the nursery school teacher, or Mother or Dad. But every hero is surrounded by mystery. The hero is someone who is able to make meaningful changes in the lives of others, changes which the child may find impossible.

As we grow up and discover the reasons behind the mysteries, our heroes begin to tumble one by one. But even as our heroes change and pass, we continue to look to other people for an example worthy of patterning our own life. The college years (18-22 years of age) are the prime target for hero examination, and much of what goes on in the Goshen College classroom has nothing to do with literature or chemistry or music theory. I would like for us to explore briefly some of the tasks college-age students are working on, and why college faculty can have almost a hero's power to produce meaningful changes.

One of the tasks is the resolution of the parent-child relationship. Somewhere in time all mature adults must break off the tie of dependence on parents. Some youth reject everything that their parents say or do to demonstrate this separateness. Later (and for some it takes longer than for others), most are able to establish life values very similar to those of their parents, but only after other persons' values have been rejected. In this process, college professors are often looked at as adult role model alternatives. Students seem free to relate to professors as people during the time they seek independence from their parents. Then joyously parents and children can reunite as adult and adult.

The power of a hero to make changes

June Alliman Yoder joined the campus ministries team and personnel staff last fall. She will be associate dean of the student development division beginning in September.

A second task for 18-22-year-olds is that of developing their own value system. Here again what the child learned at home is very important. But each person must challenge the values his/her parents, school, and church gave him/her and compare it with many others. Then, after the comparison, a personal value system is created. Professors and other college administrators often are able to give input into the creation of that value system by example and by word.

A third task is choosing one's life work. Many students struggle long and hard over this difficult choice. Do I search for God's will? How do I know God's will? Do I make lots of money? Do I do "service"? Can artists serve God or must I be a nurse? A varied faculty along with meaningful career counseling can allow students to try many areas of interest while keeping the God-dimension alive in their vocational choice.

A fourth task is that of discovering personal identity. Students must decide on lifestyle. Will I marry or remain single? Will I be a "book person" or a "people person"? Will I be a homemaker or a libber? Do I need lots of money or relatively little money? Goshen faculty present various models for students to observe in addition to their own parents as they seek to discover the personal identity with which they can be comfortable and of which they can be proud.

And so the question rises, just what is Christian education and what is a liberal arts education in light of these developmental tasks? At Goshen Christian education is more than Bible and religion courses; it is more than the meaning of drama in worship; and it is more than a lengthy discussion of creation versus evolution. Christian education can be plain chemistry taught with great concern for the students as well as the chemistry; Christian education can be regular business courses which model Christian ethics; Christian education can be standard residence halls with staff concerned about faith development as well as social development.

Much of what I learned at Goshen, and much of what I teach at Goshen is not classroom subject matter. Discovering one's own Christian lifestyle, stretching one's understanding of discipleship to Christ, reaching for new levels of committed caring are all part of the Christian's liberating education. Too often we define liberal arts in the world's terms of arts and sciences. Perhaps we should rather consider if there aren't Christian arts and sciences in addition to the general education of the rest of the world.

I propose that education of the total person must include an understanding of the liberating life of Jesus Christ. And only then can one find meaningful substance in the traditional liberating arts and sciences.

And so we return to the beginning. I also have a Hero . . . one who is surrounded by mystery and one who is able to make meaningful changes in the lives of others. That Hero gives meaning to the phrase "Christian liberating education" at Goshen College.

Adolescent heroes may fall by the wayside, but Hero-worship is being taught daily by faculty and staff both inside and outside the classroom.

College study in the light of faith

An interview with Phil Bontrager

"To me, the whole thing of what I'm doing is secondary to what I'm being. The whole matter about what I am as a person — my values and priorities — are set from the basis of faith."

Speaking to the Bulletin is Phil Bontrager, a 22-year-old sophomore majoring in economics. He is talking to the editor about how he personally — introspectively — has joined his Christian pilgrimage with undergraduate study.

"College study removed from faith would not be helpful to me. College study simply has to be seen in the light of faith."

He continues, "There are those, however, who put faith 'on hold' until they get through college. They easily let academic studies and the pressure for A's — or something else — be their excuses not to work through personal faith issues. But one gets the feeling they would put faith 'on hold' whether they were on a college campus or elsewhere. GC gives the student the alternative and the freedom not to work through the faith issue while he or she is here."

What the student makes of it

According to Phil, "Faith and studies can be woven together to the extent the student wants. In some courses, one is not forced to deal with the issue of faith due to the content of the subject.

"The biggest challenge in the growth of faith for me is in the non-professional settings. I personally see a lot of attitudes by profs and administrators influenced because of their faith. For them, this thing of faith affects how they interact with students. And, I find that when I'm ready to step out and quit playing a student role, they're willing to step out and quit being like a prof."

An unusual perspective

Phil speaks from a perspective that is not common to the majority of college students. After graduation from Lancaster Mennonite High School in 1972, he worked and then traveled for several months in Europe. Then, at age 19, he accepted an assignment in Honduras under the Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities. His post was administrative assistant, and he took care of the legal paperwork, passports, visas, tax papers, etc., in Tegucigalpa so that the 25 missionaries in rural Honduras could carry out their program. Also, he worked part time in a bilingual school as bookkeeper, school bus driver, physical education instructor.

It was through his work in Tegucigalpa that GC called on him to help with administrative details of the Study-Service Trimester program. He learned to know Norman and Sharon Kauffmann, 1975 faculty leaders, and with their encouragement, completed about a year's work of college credits through independent study and "testing out" of Spanish. Because of their friendship, "a lot of stereotypes I had about GC were broken, and I enrolled at GC last fall," says Phil.

Phil pays tribute to Norm, "On a lot of the issues that I wanted clarification — Norm was able to help me. And he helped me to see that some of the skills I had could be sharpened through a college education." Phil's concentration is in economics, perhaps as a base for Christian service in international development.

Faith — and the future

In connection with his future Phil says, "I don't see it that a person has to be a pastor or in missionary work in order that faith be an important part of life. Faith is important to one's values no matter what the occupation is."

Defining faith more personally, Phil speaks of "how I see myself in relationship to the concept of God, who He is, and how I fit into that concept."

He continues, "Faith is also recognizing myself as part of the people of God, and receiving direction from that community for the rest of my life — in decision-making, in affirmation when I'm feeling low, in responding to discipleship.

"In dealing with people outside the people of God, one must have a lifestyle that manifests kingdom values."

Returning to the subject of faith and study, Phil summarizes, "So much of academics on a college campus is internally focused. One must remember that faith requires time to know other persons — in depth — to develop good and lasting interpersonal relationships — to see each other's real values." And, with a seriousness that belies his 22 years, he says, "Faith is also recognizing that the answers come easier on a college campus than they do, say, in Honduras or in practical life."

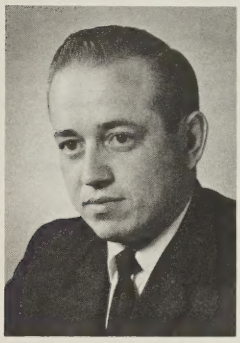
The importance of faithful leadership

By Charles H. Gautsche



Charles Gautsche is chairman of the GC Board of Overseers and pastor of Central Mennonite Church, Archbold, OH.

As I reflect on my past experience in the Mennonite Church, especially in the years since my own ordination, certain high lights come to mind. Some of these are:

(1) The 1963 General Conference at Kalona, Iowa, when the "Mennonite Confession of Faith" was adopted by unanimous vote. The committee had worked since 1957 to prepare this confession of faith and I was deeply impressed by the competence of their work and their concern that the best wording be used to express a faith which was so precious and meaningful to them and the denomination they served. These persons, skilled in theology and semantics, were persons who taught in our church schools or had studied there.

(2) The Study of Reorganization of our Mennonite Church in 1969 at the General Conference in Turner, Oregon, and then the acceptance of the new plan of organization at Kitchener, Ontario, in 1971, again by unanimous vote, is another high light of my church experience. Again the leading persons in this work were administrative and teaching personnel from our church schools and those who studied there to prepare for their church vocations.

(3) As a third high light, I would cite the very effective function of Mennonite Central Committee in the relief work conducted in our world. Another would be the broad range of work done under the Mennonite Board of Missions. The creative ideas and careful planning to incorporate the principles of good stewardship and faithful witness to the love of God are important to the church and her life and ministry. The great majority of persons working in these areas have received their training in our Mennonite colleges and seminaries.

For the future, I believe it is very important that there be an emphasis upon training for leadership and service. We must provide our own schools where faculty and students are encouraged to confront the issues of today and tomorrow with the tenets and ethics of the Christian faith. The future will certainly require the best qualities of faithfulness that we appreciate from the past and also creative new ways to deal with the challenges that shall arise from our Anabaptist faith and tradition.

To have these qualities in our future leadership we cannot rely on the state or even the "evangelical" and "fundamental" schools outside our denomination to provide the training. The credentials we must require are those that have come to us out of a precious tradition in which persons held that faithfulness, diligence, and obedience to the Word of God must always take precedence over success, popularity, and acclamation by the world.

To provide such schools, however, will require an increasing support from the church and a closer relationship with the church. There will also need to be more co-operation between the schools — an effort to supplement mutually the educational offering given to our students and to maximize the benefits returned to the churches.

The immediate years ahead are crucial to the Mennonite Church and will require a devotion and sacrifice on the part of all of us. We are at the point in our history, a pivotal point, and the way we turn will determine to a large measure the nature of our church for future decades.

We look back with appreciation for the contributions of the lives of present leaders; but let us also look ahead with vision and commitment for the future of the church, and consider how important it is that an emphasis on preparation of personnel may be considered a valid "mission" of the church.

Robert and Dorothy Yoder

*Saturday, June 24, through Wednesday, July 5, 1978

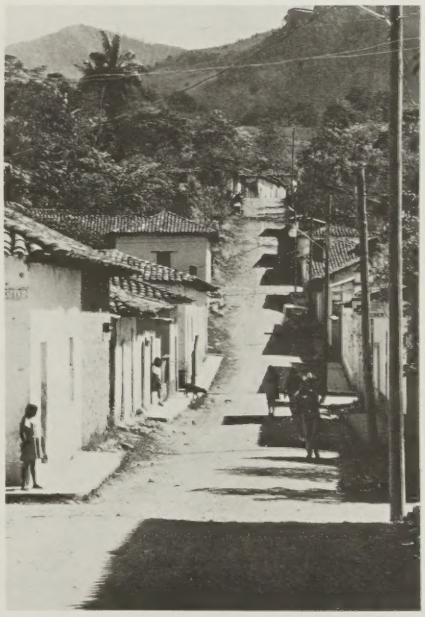
*Ten days in Spanish-speaking Honduras

*Prof. Robert Yoder and his wife Dorothy, who directed three Study-Service Trimesters in Honduras, will lead this continuing education experience.

*If you would like to see Honduras like GC's students on the Study-Service Trimester see Honduras . . .

*If you would like to meet Hondurans that the tourist never meets . . .

*Write to Alice Roth, Mini-SST Organizer, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526, for more details . . . today.



Near the El Salvador border is the scenic Honduran village of San Marcos de Ocotepeque. In this setting, winter SST-er Mark Miller, a junior from Chenoa, IL, worked with CEDEN, a protestant organization concerned with hurricane relief and agriculture development. One of Mark's jobs was to vaccinate cattle.

About the cover: This past winter Gail Janzen, a sophomore from Fresno, CA, was at Valle de Angeles, Honduras, for her field work of the Study-Service Trimester. In the village are an orphanage and the Hospital Adventista. (Photos by Bruce Glick.)

You can help GC conserve funds

Did you know the U.S. Postal Service charges Goshen College 25 cents for each Bulletin returned to campus because of an incorrect address?

Over the fiscal year this is sizable expense when many hundreds of address changes must be made each month.

In telling about address changes, you also can help update the address lists by telling us if you are receiving more than one copy of the Bulletin.

Should you know of others who need to make address changes, or who have died and their name still is on our mailing list (we can only remove it if someone shares this information with us), please let us know.

If you move, please notify the Bulletin at least six weeks in advance of your new address. It will help much if you will enclose the address label from your most recent copy of the Bulletin.

Your action at any of these points will help the GC budget and will keep you from missing any issues of the Bulletin.

Seven in Washington

By Alice Roth

Alice Metzler '57 Roth is director of alumni relations and executive secretary of the Alumni Association. She joined the staff at Goshen College last fall.

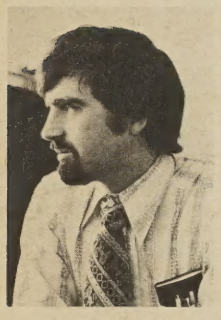
From the beginning it was a given that one day was available to ferret out what Goshen College alumni are doing in Greater Washington, D.C. The day, it turned out, was March 11, appropriately in connection with a March 12 seminar and dinner meeting, all a conjoint project of Eastern Mennonite, Goshen and Hesston colleges for their alumni, parents, and prospective students.

But it is impossible to visit the about 200 GC alumni who have addresses in that metropolitan area in one day. With thanks to Anne Quiring '60 Miller, however, seven visits with Maple Leaf alumni were squeezed into a few hours. Anne had made the appointments and checked the best traffic routes in advance, then served as Alice's chauffeuse.

Apologies to all you who were missed. What you do, how you worship, how you translate "Culture for Service" to the world of 1977 is always welcome from you for the news notes.

Incidentally, Alice hopes to repeat her "whirlwind reporting schedule" in other metropolitan — as well as non-metropolitan — areas, wherever Goshen College alumni are found and wherever they organize for regional meetings.

The needs of the deaf: Eli Savanick '71



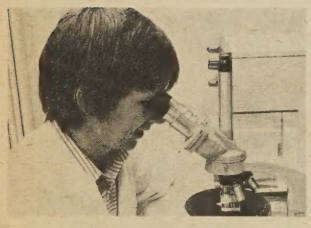
Eli Savanick

Eli Savanick's two jobs both involve working for and with the deaf. Last summer Eli received his master's degree in pre-school deaf education from Gallaudet College. He continues with Gallaudet as assistant to the director of the new International Center on Deafness.

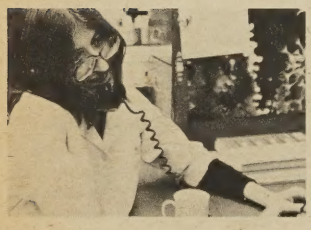
His other job is staffing the Mennonite Board of Missions pioneer efforts in ministries with the deaf. As part of this, he is surveying the Mennonite Church to determine needs, identifying Mennonite professionals in this field, and working toward greater deaf-awareness in congregations. Washington is a good place for this office because it is a center for education and other resources for the deaf.

Eli's vision brings together his jobs and his experience at Goshen College. "Our Anabaptist tradition of caring and our service orientation makes special education a natural field for us. Increasingly, the arena for this is the whole world." Eli is excited about recent government moves toward services for the deaf in developing countries. Anything already under way in these countries has usually been started by the church. He sees real opportunity for Mennonite personnel in developing services for the handicapped around the world, and an urgent need for Mennonite colleges, including Goshen, to train this personnel. He notes the precedent of Mennonite Ruth Bender, now of Goshen, whose book The Conquest of Deafness remains a standard text.

More immediately, Eli's schedule included a late March trip to Jamaica for two weeks of in-service training with teachers of the deaf in Mennonite mission schools and planning for deaf services at Estes '77 in June.



Dean Mann



Ulrike Lichti

Research in immunology: Dean Mann '56

Finding Dean Mann '56 at the National Institutes of Health was a challenge. First it was locating the right building (of 57), then the right elevator, then the right corridor. Finally, in a tiny office partitioned off from the surrounding laboratory, (as though the test tubes grudged the office space), we found Dean — a senior investigator in the immunology branch of the National Cancer Institute.

An even more difficult task was trying to understand the research that occupies Dean's work hours. He explained in the form of questions about cell surfaces: How does the cell recognize a foreign organism? What turns on the cell's rejection mechanism as a foreigner invades? Why do some people get a certain disease and others do not, even when equally exposed?

Dean's particular interest is in genetic factors of immunology. Currently he is doing studies of Amish communities in northern Indiana. The long bibliography of his papers published in scientific journals is one kind of history of his career.

During the short interview with Dean, there were reminders that his work is part of a large network. A package was delivered from Halifax. Dean carefully unwrapped the test tubes and puzzled over the contents — there was no identification of the sender. Later in the afternoon he would fly to Duke University for work as part of an international research team.

Dean and Darlene's six children are from 9 to 17 years old. A review of their interests and activities indicates a lively household — including two daughters who practice every day in preparation (hopefully) for the 1980 Olympic gymnastics team.

Biochemist on cancer: Ulrike Lichti '58

Also in the Cancer Institute, but in the Division of Cancer Cause and Prevention, is Ulrike Lichti. Working in the experimental pathology branch, Ulrike and her co-workers (two women, three men) attempt to set up systems in which normal cells become cancerous, and to recognize intermediate stages in this process. Ulrike enjoys the interaction with her co-researchers.

Her particular interest is in tumor "promoters," attempting to discover what stimulates cells to multiply abnormally.

Ulrike has been at NIH for two years. Since receiving her doctorate in biochemistry from the University of Wisconsin, she has worked at Cambridge, England, and in a Rockefeller Foundation project in Thailand.

On Sunday morning, Ulrike was involved in a simulation game with the children at Hyattsville Mennonite Church. This was part of a study of the People of God in the Old Testament, the setting at a time near the end of the period of Exile. One group in the game represented those who wanted to stay in the land of Exile. Ulrike's group represented those who wanted to return to the homeland. Both these tried to convince the third group, the undecided. Ulrike reported that each side advanced strong arguments for its point of view.

Life in four worlds: Jeannine Schrag '71

Inside the massive doors of the Dirksen Office Building on Capitol Hill the directory lists the senators' office numbers. Four flights up and many doors down the corridor, a sign identifies "Minority Office, Committee on Public Works."

Jeannine Schrag, a secretary for this committee, reports that the name was recently changed to Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works. Names and people come and go rapidly on The Hill. Senate committee staff writes and rewrites drafts of legislative bills and conducts related hearings. This committee works on bills related to clean air and water, waste disposal, emission controls — to name just a few.

Jean's work includes a lot of mail and phone answering. In these contacts she senses on the part of many people an awe of government, an ambiguous love-hate feeling.

Jean came to Washington when a friend invited her to share a house. She got her present job through WOW, Washington Opportunities for Women — an organization that attempts to affirm women through services such as career counseling and job placement. The glamour of a Hill job (like riding the elevator with a favorite senator) soon wears off. All committee employees and the personal staff of Congress members are exempt from employment regulations like Affirmative Action or minimum wage. There are no job descriptions and no legal recourse for job problems. Jean does feel that the attitude toward female employees has improved in the two and a half years she has been on this job.

Betsy Beyler

Forrest D. Miller

Charles and Kathy Smith

This is only one of Jean's "worlds." There is also George Washington University, where she is in a master's program in elementary education with a specialty in diagnostic reading.

At Hyattsville Mennonite Church Jean is co-chairperson of the worship task group. And Jean adds a fourth "world," that group of friends that don't belong to either of the first three circles.

How did life at GC prepare her for living in the city? Jean points first to SST. "In SST I got to a confidence level that allows me to move into a new setting."

Jean is involved in Eastern Mennonite College's first Washington seminar, a program that brings students to D.C. for a year of study and work. She would like to see GC also in this program.

A voice for the voiceless: Betsy Beyler '72

Even a brief visit to the Mennonite Central Committee Peace Section office in Washington gives one the impression of a spot where many currents intersect. Betsy Beyler's desk in the crowded front office is the junction of many of these currents.

Betsy sees the purpose of the MCC Washington office as "helping the church carry out the role of being a voice for the voiceless . . . we're not a lobby. But we have strength in that we represent people working all over the world. This is our only credibility."

Three years ago, as Betsy was completing her sixth year of work with Fellowship of Reconciliation in Europe, she felt a need to "narrow down" her constituency. Coming to MCC did this, but she found that she could not narrow down the issues. Following US policy, and the related concerns of Mennonites, involves her with every corner of the globe.

Betsy works as an administrative assistant to office director Delton Franz. Each of the office staff of four tries to follow US policy on particular issues, and reports on these to the church. Betsy, for example, writes on military spending for Washington Memo.

This year Betsy is vice chairperson for WISC, the Washington Interreligious Staff Council. Meeting every two weeks, this group serves as a clearinghouse for information and communication among similar "shops" — the religious offices in Washington that share the same concerns. A particular interest of Betsy's is the WISC task force on criminal justice. Other special interests include native American issues and immigration policies.

At the time of the interview, Betsy was working on plans for a seminar especially for women. While national policy issues are not "women's" issues by any means, she feels that women especially need firsthand exposure to the issues, and to be informed of the impact they can have in speaking to them.

Greater awareness among Mennonites for national and international issues is a concern that permeates Betsy's outlook and work. "People need to be affirmed in terms of their own background, and there is a lot of excitement in what we have to share. But we need also to be aware of the complexities of the world."

The office staff represents four Mennonite colleges — Tabor, Bethel, Eastern Mennonite and Goshen. Add to that Betsy's experience at Conrad Grebel College, and one might conclude that Mennonite higher education is represented in our voice in the capital!

Traffic engineer: Forrest D. Miller '59

On a visit to Forrest D. Miller's office, you can learn such facts as the speed of traffic on Franklin Street in downtown Hagerstown, Maryland, at peak afternoon traffic time. Forrest recently completed a TOPICS study (Traffic Operations Program to Increase Capacity and Safety) for Hagerstown and Washington County, Maryland.

Forrest is employed by a firm that does consultation in transportation, environmental and urban planning. His start in this direction came in a Purdue University traffic engineering course during his senior year. After doing his first two years at GC, Forrest finished his B.S. and M.S. in civil engineering at Purdue. From 1961-69 he was principal traffic engineer for St. Louis County, Missouri.

In recent years Forrest has done numerous toll studies. These feasibility studies regarding the economics of projected highways or bridges provide research and projections crucial to financing highway projects. "This business is half science, half art," Forrest says, "and your name rests on the accuracy of your predictions."

The goal in traffic engineering is safe and efficient movement of people. A new feature in this field in recent years is emphasis on feedback from the public as part of the research.

Forrest's work takes him to other cities. He and his wife Anne had their own mini-SST last year when he worked on an UN financed traffic flow project in San Jose, Costa Rica.

The church family has been important to Millers — in St. Louis, at Hyattsville Mennonite, and now in the new North Virginia Mennonite Church fellowship. The group has been worshipping for several months in a Seventh Day Adventist Church which they share on Sunday morning with a United Church of Christ group. That sounds like efficient facility use!

A church home was first: Charles '71 and Kathy '69 Smith

Charles '71 and Kathy Unternahrer '69 Smith chat with Arden Shank '74, Mennonite student services coordinator in the Washington area.

Nearly six years ago, Charles saw an ad on the GC education department bulletin board indicating that Charles County, Maryland, was looking for 20 math teachers. He applied, and they moved to the Washington area by the next school year.

How do you put down roots in a totally strange community? Charles and Kathy began by looking for a church home. They found it sooner than expected, in a Brethren Church near their apartment. A family in the congregation "adopted" them, and became substitute grandparents and aunts and uncles for their little Christopher, who is now two years old.

Bixler '52 featured in National Observer

The April 16 issue of The National Observer features music therapist John Bixler '52 of U. of Iowa and his efforts to give crippled and retarded children, mostly adolescents with many problems, a treat and a treatment.

The article centers in how Bixler uses drums, bells and barbershop — as well as other music styles and instruments — to help handicapped children help themselves. Bixler sees "making music" as "a healing act."

The U. of Iowa program is one which bridges the School of Music with the College of Medicine. It now offers a full-fledged curriculum for training registered music therapists, who, by the way, are in demand.

On the value of music therapy, Bixler told The National Observer, "The youngsters enjoy it. Out of it comes an impetus for speech and new motivation. I have seen countless examples of motivation for speech, art, physical activities like walking and selfcare."

Wounded SST-er back on campus

Steve Birky (second from right) was welcomed home April 15 after suffering gunshot wounds inflicted by a Haitian security guard eight days earlier. From the left are his aunt, Mary Brenneman; Anne Shoemaker, a fellow student who accompanied him by plane from Haiti; Verna Birky, his mother; Steve; and his father, Luke Birkey, (Photo by Fred Flury, Elkhart Truth.)

Steve Birky, who was innocently shot and wounded by a government security guard in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, at about 10 p.m. on April 7, is back on campus in classes.

Birky is a junior who was on the Study-Service Trimester in Haiti from January to April. He is the first of 2,149 SST-ers who have completed the overseas experience to be involved in such an incident.

Two bullets struck him, but no vital organs were damaged. One bullet entered his right side near the abdomen and came out the back of the left side. The other grazed his scalp.

After the shooting, the U.S. Embassy assisted in establishing his identity and getting him to the hospital, where he underwent a two-hour operation.

The incident occurred when Steve was walking with Anne Shoemaker, another student, to Steve's Haitian home about 10 p.m.

About 50 yards away from Steve's Haitian home, a guard to the Secretary General of Haiti began firing. Anne Shoemaker managed to get to Steve's house, but Steve stayed nearby to try to explain his identity to the guard. The guard continued firing, and a bullet struck Steve.

The reasons for the unprovoked volley of bullets are yet unknown. It is speculated that in the dark the guard may have mistook the Goshen College students for intruders.

Port-au-Prince, the nation's capital, has routinely blacked out its electric power in certain sections of the city this spring because of low hydroelectric power, and the lights were out that evening.

Upon his return to his home at Elkhart, Indiana, Steve said, "I understand that the guard was a pretty young, inexperienced policeman." He explained, "With a lack of water in Port-au-Prince, there are electrical blackouts, and some burglaries were going on. Things were tense and we probably just scared the guard." Steve said he is sorry the shooting occurred, but he is not angry at the guard.

Haitian officials, according to Steve, were deeply embarrassed about the incident and were very helpful during his hospitalization. The government paid all the medical expenses, and Haitian President Jean Claude Duvalier relayed his personal regrets.

Gifts from Exxon employes matched 3-for-1

The Exxon Education Foundation and the Exxon Corporation have announced an unusual incentive program for its employes and the employes of the corporation's affiliates.

Effective Jan. 1, 1977, employe and annuitant contributions will be matched $3 for every $1. The maximum employe or annuitant contribution that will be matched is $3,000 a year.

In other words, for every $1 contributed to a college or university by an active employe or an annuitant, Exxon will match it by $3.

C. C. Garvin, Jr., chairman of the board of Exxon, told J. Lawrence Burkholder, GC president, "We hope these incentives will stimulate increases in gifts to colleges and universities by the employes of Exxon and its affiliates."

He added, "We see a financial crisis developing in higher education, and we want to respond to it by a liberal matching gift program for our employes and annuitants."

GC alumni who are Exxon employes should identify themselves as Exxon employes when sending their gifts so the proper forms may be requested for the firm's matching gift.

Plan now for a mini-SST in Honduras

Robert and Dorothy Yoder, leaders of the Honduras Mini-SST

Goshen College international education department and the alumni office announce another mini-SST for friends, parents of students, and alumni.

*Saturday, June 24, through Wednesday, July 5, 1978

*Ten days in Spanish-speaking Honduras

*Prof. Robert Yoder and his wife Dorothy, who directed three Study-Service Trimesters in Honduras, will lead this continuing education experience.

*If you would like to see Honduras like GC's students on the Study-Service Trimester see Honduras . . .

*If you would like to meet Hondurans that the tourist never meets . . .

*Send the coupon to receive more information.

Board extends wishes to seniors

At commencement weekend senior breakfast, the good wishes of GC alumni were expressed to the graduates by Alumni Association president Leanne Schertz '58. Alumni board members attended the breakfast and provided spring flowers for the tables.

In their business meeting later that day (April 16), board members reviewed the annual fund, planned for the October 8-9 Alumni Weekend, and initiated planning for the alumni ballot.

Fund committee chairman Stanley Boyer '58 reported to the board that on April 15, a total of 2,092 alumni had contributed to the '77 Fund. This compares to 2,900 at the same time last year. In light of the fund goal of involving 1,000 more contributors this year than last, this figure caused some concern. It was noted that there were three fund mailings so far this year, compared to four mailings last year, and that the telephone campaign was held earlier.

Plans for the April 18-28 Telefund called for contacting some 2,600 alumni about their pledge to the annual fund. Alumni secretary Alice Roth '57 reported that about 70 students, alumni, faculty and staff persons had volunteered to phone.

Four alumni board members will be elected this year, along with a president-elect. Ballots will be mailed to alumni in late July, anticipating announcement of new board members at Alumni Weekend in October. Board members considered the interests and geographic areas needed on the board.

Reviewing last year's Alumni Weekend, board members noted the enthusiastic participation in the Saturday morning alumni clinics. Suggestions for clinic topics are welcome from any alumni. These clinics could be led by either faculty or alumni.

GC business manager J. Robert Kreider '41 gave the board an overview of the college's financial operations, including the budget building process.

Looking ahead to their October 8 meeting, board members asked for a review of the organizational changes resulting in the creation of the student development division, an administrative change that will be implemented in the 1977-78 school year.

Last Will and Testament of John Doe who Died Without a Legal Will. This Will drawn up for him by the State.

I, John Doe, of Centerville, Indiana, hereby do make, publish, and declare this to be my Last Will and Testament.

First Article

I give my wife only one-third (1/3) of my possessions, and I give my children the remaining two-thirds (2/3).

I. I appoint my wife as guardian of my children, but as a safeguard I require that she report to the Probate Court each two years and render an accounting of how, why and where she spent the money necessary for the proper care of my children.

II. As a further safeguard, I direct my wife to produce to the Probate Court a Performance Bond to guarantee that she exercises proper judgment in the handling, investing and spending of the children's money.

III. As a final safeguard, my children shall have the right to demand and receive a complete accounting from their mother of all of her financial actions with their money as soon as they reach legal age.

IV. When my daughter reaches age twenty-one (21), she shall have full rights to withdraw and spend her share of my estate. My son shall have his right as soon as he reaches age twenty-one (21). No one shall have any right to question my children's actions on how they decide to spend their respective shares.

Second Article

Should my wife remarry, her second husband shall be entitled to one-third (1/3) of her personal property and a life estate in one-third (1/3) of her real estate.

I. Should my children need some of this share for their support, the second husband shall not be bound to spend any part of his share on my children's behalf.

II. The second husband shall have sole right to decide who is to get his share, even to the exclusion of my children.

Third Article

Should my wife predecease me or die while any of my children are minors, I do not wish to exercise my right to nominate the guardian of my children.

I. Rather than nominating a guardian of my preference, I direct my relatives and friends to get together and select a guardian by mutual agreement.

II. In the event that they fail to agree on a guardian, I direct the Probate Court to make the selection. If the court wishes, it may appoint a stranger acceptable to it.

Fourth Article

Under existing tax law, there are certain legitimate avenues open to me to lower death taxes. Since I prefer to have my money used for governmental purposes rather than for the benefit of my wife and children, my church or my alma mater, I direct that no effort be made to lower taxes.

In Witness Whereof, I have set my hand and seal to this, my Last Will and Testament, all this _____ day of _____, 19___.

This is not a real will. But it tells what can actually happen when you do not have a Last Will and Testament drawn up for you by an attorney.

Does it express your desire? If not, only you can change it. Your attorney can prepare a will which will guarantee that your desires will be carried out.

Consider, too, your responsibility as a good steward. By remembering Goshen College in your will, you are assured that a portion of that which God has entrusted to you during your lifetime will be used to develop sensitive, responsible Christian disciples.

Telefund may net $40,000

The 1977 Alumni Association Telefund, April 18 through April 28, yielded pledges totaling $28,958. Gifts from persons who said "maybe" or were not at home when called are expected to exceed $11,000, bringing the expected grand total to over $40,000.

The pledged figures of $28,958 this year tops by over $10,000 the previous record-breaker of $18,363 pledged last year. Seventy volunteers completed 2,214 calls across the nation. Among the volunteers were alumni and parents from Elkhart County, faculty and staff, and students.

The Telefund was the annual telephone campaign seeking gifts for quality teaching at Goshen College.

In addition to the completed calls, volunteers sent 763 "maybe" letters to those who said they might give, and 767 "couldn't reach you" letters.

Becky Nussbaum, a GC sophomore from Bristol, In. won the grand prize for completing 69 calls and securing $2,900 in pledges. She received a $250 scholarship.

Ceramic pieces made by students at GC were awarded nightly to the caller with the highest total of pledge dollars.

Robert Wenger, a parent from Elkhart, secured the greatest amount of pledged dollars for a single evening—$1,125. He was last year's grand prize winner.

Other winners of ceramic prizes were Susan Eash '77, Albert Hornberger '57, Inez Hostetler '51, Willard Martin '57, and Roberta Miller, Jerry Smucker and Brad Sommers, all freshmen.

Donors of the prize money were Ralph '28 and Lucille '52 Schenk, and David '61 and Janet Johns, all of Goshen, and Richard '61 and Shelby Hershberger, of Elkhart.

The Mennonite offices at Greencroft Center, Elkhart, and the main offices of Salem Bank and Trust Company, Goshen, loaned their desks and made their trunk lines available for the marathon phone effort. Calling was also done from the Administration Building of GC.

Reservations and the $5 deposit toward the $15 registration are due at GC by September 23.

Although many alumni are enjoying the spring season, the alumni relations committee is making plans for a tightly-packed Alumni Weekend, Oct. 8-9.

The Alumni Association has officially set class reunions for Saturday noon, Oct. 8. Classes observing anniversary reunions will be the Old Timers (Class of '27 and earlier), 1932, 1937, 1942, 1947, 1952, 1957, 1962, 1967 and 1972.

Other high lights of the day will be:

*The alumni annual banquet, open to former students of all college and academy classes.

*For the athletics enthusiasts, GC men will host Tri-State that day in tennis, and GC women will host Calvin and Taylor in field hockey.

If you have low-yield appreciated property, consider the pooled life income agreement

If you need a shelter for capital gains, an immediate tax deduction, a high yield (in the range of 6.5 percent or higher) and the psychic satisfaction of doing good for a philanthropic organization like Goshen College, the pooled-income fund may be for you.

Goshen College has been offering its benefactors the pooled-income fund for some time. The pooled-income fund operates much like a commercial mutual fund in that it is an open-end pool of capital. A donor shares in the earnings of the pool in direct proportion to the amount of money he/she puts into it.

Goshen College's pooled-income fund is managed by the Mennonite Foundation, which, in turn, relies on outside investment counsel for recommendations.

Because an investment in a charitable pooled-income fund is a contribution, it rates a tax deduction. The size of the deduction, determined through a complicated set of actuarial tables, varies with the donor's age and sex.

Thus, a 75 year old man trading $10,000 of cash (or it could be appreciated stocks or other property) to the Goshen College Pooled Life Income Fund would be entitled to a $5,822 deduction spread over up to six years. But a 75 year old woman, because of her longer life expectancy, would be allowed a deduction of only $5,364.

The deduction helps to shelter income payments made by the funds, which are taxable as ordinary income. One of the big talking points for the funds is the way they can be used to protect capital gains.

For example, a donor fortunate enough to have bought I.B.M. when it was $50 can exchange the stock for participation in the Goshen College Pooled Life Income Fund at the current market value (about $270) without any tax on the gain, either to himself or subsequently to his estate.

This is especially attractive to donors who are older persons who cannot afford to pay capital gains taxes and who may need more current income. It's to their obvious advantage to switch out of a growth stock that might be yielding only 2 percent into a pooled-income fund yielding about 6.5 percent.

If you are sympathetic to the purposes and aims of Goshen College, you are invited to ponder the financial considerations of the tax edge and the prospect of a high — but not guaranteed — lifetime income from a contribution, which after your death or the death of the beneficiary, goes to Goshen College.

All contributions to a pooled-income fund are irrevocable. They can be made on behalf of other persons, like a spouse, a brother, a sister. A contribution, say, on behalf of a sister does not contribute to her estate, but the donor is seeing that she will have a lifetime income.

In general, the life-income fund is appealing to widows or widowers who have nobody to leave their estates to or couples who either have no children or whose families have already been well provided for.

Upper right: Lorel R. Schmidt, from Many Farms, Arizona, was among the 51 graduating nurses to be pinned by Lehman R. Beardsley, chairman of Elkhart General Hospital's board, on April 16. In this year's nursing class were six men.

Lower right: April 17 was a balmy spring day for the traditional walk from the Church-Chapel to the Union. An overflow crowd attended commencement. U.S. Sen. Mark Hatfield (R-Ore.), speaker, openly professed that his Christian faith does affect his politics.

Publications available for $5 or less

Mennonite Artists Contemporary

Mennonite Artists Contemporary 1975 contains information representing 54 living artists who are present or past Mennonites. An example of each artist's work is shown. Several of the artists are Goshen College alumni and faculty.

Mennonite Artists Contemporary makes an attractive addition to any home or church library and would be an excellent gift for the young person with art interests.

The book has an embossed white cover and is $5 postpaid.

Hymn Preludes for the Mennonite Hymnal

Hymn Preludes for the Mennonite Hymnal, 1969, contains 28 preludes by composers acquainted with the Mennonite Church, including Charles Burkhart, J. Harold Moyer and Alice Parker. The preludes are based on tunes found in the Mennonite Hymnal.

The book is plastic bound for easy use at organ (or piano) and is $3.50 postpaid.

Festival Song Book

Festival of the Word Song Book, from the April, 1974, Festival is available at $1.35 postpaid. ($1.10 a copy for five copies or more.)

The book contains 40 songs, among them tunes from earlier festivals and 12 songs composed especially for the 1974 fete.

The Word with Us in All Things

The Pinchpenny Press publication, The Word with Us in All Things, containing poems and short stories from the 1975 Mennonite Writers' Conference at Goshen College, is now available.

Allan Dueck, formerly a graduate assistant in English at GC and currently instructor at Hesston College, selected and edited the work of 29 contributors.

The 47-page publication represents some of the best writing resulting from the conference, held in 1975 at GC.

Guest speakers whose works are in the book include Dolores Frese, Urie Bender and Nick Lindsay. Other contributors were registrants at the conference and represent a full range of occupations, ages, and geographic locations.

The cost is $2 postpaid.

Other Pinchpenny Press titles

If Words Were Wrens: An Anthology of Irish Poetry. A collection of poems by leading contemporary Irish poets—Austin Clarke, Seamus Heaney, Richard Ryan, Richard Murphy, and others. Editor John Fisher says, "The effect . . . of this collection is austerely Chaucerian, warmly Frostian. It gives spiritual nourishment." First released in 1974. 49 pp. $1.80 postpaid.

An Oral History of Edisto Island: Sam Gadsden Tells the Story. Black, 82-year-old Sam Gadsden tells the story of Edisto Island, South Carolina. The story has been recorded and translated by Nick Lindsay. An "Introduction" by the translator supplements this primary source material in black, southern American history. First released in 1974. 73 pp. $1.80 postpaid.

The Mbiabet Chieftaincy. Living history—cultural conflict and change as Christianity invades an African village. Written by Asukwo J. Udo, the living heir to the chieftaincy. First released in 1974. 55 pp. $1.80 postpaid.

Folk Stories from Belize: "We jus catch um." By Shirley A. Warde and Ervin Beck. A collection of folk tales transcribed literally from the tape-recorded performances gathered by Mrs. Warde in 1955. Four of the tales are in near-standard English, four are in Belizean Creole. First released in 1974. 61 pp. $1.85 postpaid.

Faculty update

In parentheses are the teaching area and years of service. Because of space, the faculty items represent only a portion of the activities and achievements of the current year.

Ervin Beck '59 (English, 1967-) and John Ingold '59 (physical education, 1964-) have been accepted for the Lilly Endowment's 1977 Faculty Workshop on the "Concept and Methods of Illuminative Evaluation" to be held at Colorado College Aug. 3-17.

Merle Jacobs '48 (zoology, 1964-) had a paper in Insect Biochemistry 1976 on "Binding of Beta-Alanine, and Dopa 1-C-14 by Normal, Ebony, and Dark Drosophila Melanogaster Cuticles."

In another development, Jacobs recently scored an important breakthrough in cell biology research. He has demonstrated that an easily-produced, three-carbon amino acid called beta-alanine reacts vigorously with sugars to produce tan colors in the skin of the fruit fly. The implications are far-reaching for control of cellular development in both plants and animals. In humans, it has potential for the control of cancer tumors and for improvement of mental health disorders. In agriculture, it suggests future ways to control pathogenic fungi and harmful insects that damage crops.

Stanely N. Grove '65 (biology, 1975-) has been named guest associate professor at the University of Notre Dame with access to an electron microscopy laboratory. Stan went to Toulouse, France, in May to participate in a Ph.D. exam for a candidate in cell biology.

Philip K. Clemens '63 (music, 1970-) performed an organ recital at Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania, and directed the Franconia Singers in singing one of his own compositions, March 6-7, 1977.

Atlee Beechy '35 (psychology, 1949-) has written "Lessons of Aid in Viet-Nam," published in WIN, an IDOC Monograph No. 18, "The Future of Missionary Enterprise" and by Church World Service. In another activity, he participated in a large peace rally in Ireland in December, and is returning to Ireland this spring to teach peace studies to a group of GC students. The setting is Glencree, an old castle near Dublin, and the foci are the complex problems of the Irish and an exploration of the movements for peace and reconciliation.

Alta E. Schrock (biology, 1946-58) retired in May. She is a board member of Christian Outreach of Maryland, which recently bought a 380-acre farm to launch an extensive program to rehabilitate youth ages 15-25.

Wilbur Birky '63 (English, 1964-) will use his Lilly Endowment Faculty Fellowship to teach at Hokusei University, Sapporo, Japan, 1977-78, and to study in England in spring, 1978.

J. Daniel Hess (communication, 1964-) presented the C. Henry Smith Peace Lecture on "Integrity as Shalom" at Bluffton College March 22, and the Conrad Grebel lectures, titled "Let Your Yea Be Yea" at EMC April 21-23, at GC May 2-6, and at Hesston College May 11-13.

Catherine R. Mumaw (home economics, 1974-) is preparing a teacher's handbook to accompany the textbook, Management for Modern Families, for Prentice-Hall.

Ruth Gunden '52 (physical education, 1953-) is guide coordinator for the National Association for Girls and Women in Sports, which writes and interprets rules for all women's sports.

Doyle Preheim (music, 1972-) is the 1977 Alumnus of the Year at Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

Stuart Showalter (communication, 1976-) participated in a Poynter Center Program on "Ethics in Journalism" at Indiana University at South Bend on March 28. He responded to a paper by James Thomson, curator of the Nieman Fellowship Program at Harvard.

John C. Yoder (business, 1975-1976) was sworn in as associate district judge in Newton, Kansas, Jan. 10, 1977.

J. Harold Yoder '50 (physical education, 1955-) is teaching a course in educational measurements for Ball State University at Carroll High School, near Fort Wayne, this spring.

Promotions: Philip K. Clemens '63, to professor of music. Norma Jean Weldy '54, to professor of nursing. Tenure to Doyle Preheim.

Marles Preheim (music, 1975-77) has been appointed associate professor of music at Bethel College (Kans.), beginning fall, 1977.

Abner H. Hershberger '60 (art, 1965-) currently in Italy on sabbatical, exhibited works in a one-man show at Galleria Explorer, Perugia, March 13-31.

Marvin P. Bartel (art, 1970-) exhibited some 60 pieces of stoneware and porcelain in Lima, Ohio, during March. During February he exhibited in a one-man show at South Bend (Ind.) Art Center.

SST leaders for '77-78: Samuel L. '52 (education, 1961-) and Lillian '50 Yoder, Belize, three trimesters beginning fall, 1977. J. Daniel (communication, 1964-) and Joy '71 Hess, Costa Rica, five trimesters beginning winter, 1978. Richard L. '72 (admissions, 1972-) and Marcia '72 Gerig, Haiti, three trimesters beginning fall, 1977. Roman L. '41 (physical education, 1941-) and Shirley '41 Gingerich, Nicaragua, three trimesters beginning fall, 1977. Arthur A. '49 (chemistry, 1953-) and Oma '47 Smucker, Poland, spring trimester 1977.

I think Goshen's different programs abroad—Europe, Africa, Middle East, SST, etc.—are exceptionally good and are definitely one of the things that makes GC an outstanding institution of higher education.

John Huffman '75

During the years of my life in a retirement home I have come to realize more and more what Goshen College has meant to me. In retrospect I know much of my church and civic work could not have been done without the background of good teaching at GC. . . May the standard of good teaching be maintained.

I will always praise the Lord for the lasting friendships which resulted from being a student at Winter Bible School in 1940, as well as the atmosphere of acceptance any time since, when there for conferences or just a visit.

[I] get more financial appeals from GC than I can answer affirmatively, and from those other two colleges of which I am an alumnus, Millersville State and EMC. I seem to be the fund-collectors' pet, judging by mail. Fortunately, I have a round letter file, #13.

J. Paul Sauder '25
Lititz, PA

Goshen College professors are some of the finest people I have ever met. Without their influence I know I would not be as good a teacher as I am told that I am. I am continually trying to be as understanding with my students as they were with me.

Five areas host meetings

GC alumni and friends in Georgia met for the first time on March 4, when physical education instructor Kenneth J. Pletcher '70 and his wife Justine '73 visited that area. The 24 persons at the dinner meeting agreed that this should be an annual event, and that next year's invitation list might include several southeastern states. Maurice '71 and Deborah Kauffman '71 Miller hosted the meeting, which was held at Valle's Steak House in Atlanta.

Four other area meetings were held in March. A joint EMC-Hesston-Goshen meeting was held in Washington, D.C., on March 12. In the afternoon, James Hertzler '61, GC history prof, led a seminar on architecture and its relationship to history, while EMC physics prof John Horst led a group through the new Air and Space Museum. The dinner at Flagship Restaurant was chaired by HC President Laban Peachey, and special music was provided by an EMC choral group under the direction of Wilbur Maust. Anne Quiring '60 Miller was the GC representative on the planning group.

Southwestern Ohio alumni and friends met with EMC alumni on March 26 at Northridge Christian Fellowship in Springfield, Ohio. Russel Liechty '53 GC dean of students, and Wes Rediger, EMC dean of men, each spoke on "Living Together in Community." Mary Byler '45 Classen was the GC alumni hostess.

In Western Pennsylvania, GC Provost Henry D. Weaver spoke to alumni and friends on liberal arts and career planning. The alumni host committee for the March 25 dinner meeting was chaired by Richard Kauffman '68, with Willard Martin '61, Esther Eash '46 Yoder and Ada Schrock '46. The meeting was held at The Maple Pot near Donegal, Pennsylvania.

Prof. Roy Umble '35 and The Goshen Players presented an evening of drama and poetry to Northwestern Ohio alumni and friends gathered at Lockport Mennonite Church, Stryker, Ohio, on March 28. The alumni host committee here included D. Edward Diener '43, Elwood Graber '50 and Cara Frey '55 Ulrich.

Plans are under way for a Cleveland area meeting on Saturday, June 11. Elizabeth Miller '70 Broaddus is coordinating plans for this event.

New programs, new division announced

Goshen College will offer several new programs beginning in fall, 1977. New teacher certification programs will be bilingual-bicultural (Spanish-English) for elementary and secondary, early childhood (kindergarten-lower elementary), and family life (secondary).

Graduates of the bilingual-bicultural program will help fill the large number of vacancies where sizable concentrations of Spanish-speaking persons need education for their children.

The early childhood program prepares persons for nursery schools. GC sees public policy favoring nursery schools. There is a trend toward day-care centers requiring leadership staff to be baccalaureate graduates.

The family life program will prepare teachers in sex education, how to teach parenting and how to be a better brother or sister.

One-year certificate programs in biblical studies, business administration, international education, Mennonite studies, and piano pedagogy will also be launched this fall. The programs are focused (1) to attract Mennonite students (including Canadians) from non-Mennonite campuses for one year of study, and (2) to serve those who have one year of college or equivalent in maturity and experience who want "lifelong education."

Certificate programs are built on current courses. All offer 15 to 18 credit hours, plus a Bible or religion course. All can be completed in one year.

Student development is new division

More and better services to respond to the needs and interests of students and their spiritual and personal development is the goal of the new student development division. To begin full operation in September, the new division unifies administratively student personnel, admissions, and campus ministries.

Heading the new division will be Norman L. Kauffmann, dean. Other key persons will be June Allman Yoder, associate dean and responsible for admissions; and Paul M. Gingrich, responsible for campus ministries.

The benefits the new division will offer students include:

* Better continuity between persons in the field doing admissions and campus counselors. The idea is "admissions teams" with team members including head residents and other counselors ready to meet the incoming students.

* Admissions teams will offer help to the prospective student to find the best college experience for his/her interests and abilities. If the student chooses GC, the team works hard to help the incoming student.

* Because Christian commitment permeates every part of the program, campus ministries and the spiritual perspective it offers naturally fit with the counseling service.

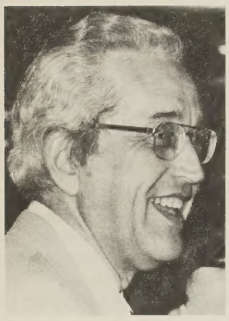
Why international students at GC?

By Henry D. Weaver



Henry D. Weaver is provost of Goshen College and professor of chemistry. He joined the faculty in 1957. His international experiences include teaching at San Marcos University, Lima, Peru; Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu, Nepal; and SST leader in Poland. In the fall he will be a consultant to the Council on International Education Exchange at Agua Amarga, Spain.

About the cover: Frieda Hsieh, a registered nurse and nursing instructor of Mennonite Christian Hospital, of Hwalien, Taiwan, is one of the international students at GC.

Many of us have come to take for granted that it is good to have students from many countries at Goshen College or at other colleges and universities in the United States. A new question has come to the surface from thinking people recently: "Would it not be better to help students from abroad attend the universities in their own countries?"

Times and situations have changed. In 1946 when Goshen began its international student program, the students were primarily from Europe, where educational opportunities were scarce for qualified students. In several African countries good universities have been developed only within the last 15 to 20 years. The quality of many Latin American universities has improved dramatically in recent years and the number of students that can be accommodated has increased markedly. In most of these cases a student has real advantages in job opportunities, access to graduate education in the home country and in developing important personal contacts by studying at home. What should our stance be today?

We agree that most students should be encouraged to attend universities in their home countries. Mission boards and service agencies should help with the costs for students to attend the home university. In some of the Study-Service locations operated by GC, we make donations to assist nationals to attend the home university as part of the reciprocity for the service they give to us. But that is not the whole picture. There are valid reasons why we should continue to have students from other countries attend Goshen College.

First, there are genuine values to many students from abroad to attend Goshen. An international student preparing to attend a U.S. university for graduate studies in a field not available at home, will be best prepared by studying at a small U.S. undergraduate school first.

Second, many international students find it advantageous to take one year at Goshen to become more fluent in English. Third, although a year at Goshen often does not give credit that can be recognized by the university at home, it may be an international student's only experience in a liberal arts setting, a setting which gives him a breadth not realized by colleagues who have only specialized studies at home. (In most countries, university training is highly specialized without subjects being taken outside the particular field of study.)

The letters appearing in this issue give ample testimony to the fact that many international students at Goshen go on to important major posts in their home countries. The United States is unique in the level of commitment to public and independent educational systems. Students who have experienced the advantages of having both systems in operation in the United States may be in a position to help find similar possibilities at home.

However, the most fundamental reason for GC relates to its emphasis on development of faith. We believe that every student who attends Goshen College should be confronted by the Christian faith as we understand it. The commitment we have to confront every student with faith is justification in itself to involve international students in the dialog. Further, their dialog with us puts a dimension of understanding to our own faith that would be impossible to achieve in any other way.

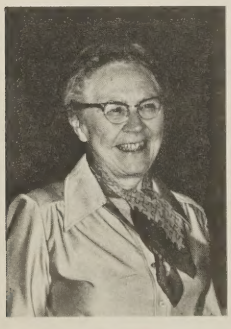
There are also advantages to the college, the church and the local community in having the students here. Most of us feel we gain more than we give. Some have asked, "Isn't that exploitation to use them for our advantage?" My personal feeling is, we need to change our thinking. Exploitation suggests a paternalistic frame of reference. We have been "giving-to-others" or "helping-the-needy" oriented for many years. It is a good and biblical orientation, but there is an additional Christian concern. Whenever we give to another we create by our act a superior-inferior relationship by the transaction. As U.S. Mennonites we have been slow to learn that other people have something to give us. We need to learn from others.

When we began the Study-Service program, some of us were concerned that we were going to less affluent countries and asking them to use some of their resources to help educate comparatively affluent North Americans. When this was raised sometime after the program began, we were surprised to find that many nationals in SST countries responded with genuine pleasure that they were giving rather than receiving. (We pay a fair wage for service, but we are talking here about the stance of the situation.) In those situations we are on the inferior side of the relationship. It is an important lesson.

International students at Goshen College give in the same way. They have changed our curriculum, they have broadened the world view of both faculty and students. They have raised the sights of our church. They have opened windows of understanding in the Goshen community. Their presence on campus, perhaps more than any other single thing, moved our campus community to a readiness to become involved in other international relationships that has led GC to be permeated by cross-cultural and international perspectives at a unique level.

Many people at Goshen have contributed to our international student program. No one has given as much to this as Viola Good. We owe her a large debt of gratitude.

She wanted the best of two worlds



Miss Good, on the faculty since 1939 with 20 of those years (1957-77) as advisor to international students, and as dean of women 1939-66, retired last month. She plans to continue to make her home in Goshen. (Photo by Janice Martin.)

The greatest reward to Miss Viola Good, GC's advisor to international students retiring this year, is to see the international students—in whom so much has been invested—become effective leaders back home.

One of those persons is Richard Ondeng', now secretary general of Kenya's Christian Churches' Education Association, the only professional body recognized by the government to advise on moral issues. When he returned to Kenya in 1966 after receiving the B.A. in history, the government enticed Ondeng' with high paying job offers. He remembers the dilemma of choosing between CCEA or taking a better salaried job. "I was influenced by my professors. They were well qualified, but they left the big money to teach at a church college."

Miss Good has a scrapbook of memories of many rewards and benefits from the international student program that she has charted for 20 years. For example, international students, true to their name, help to internationalize the campus. Miss Good says it this way, "America for so long has Americanized its immigrants. Now we have to internationalize an overly-parochial American population."

Miss Good recalls, "When the first group of international students arrived in 1946 under the leadership of then-president Ernest E. Miller, they were such a novelty, and were much in demand for roommates. And, many wanted to join the international relations club."

Today, however, with the operation of the Study-Service Trimester and one-fourth of the students on SST in the course of a year, international students are no longer a novelty on campus. American students returning from SST find it easier to relate to students from abroad, than before SST.

Attention to finances

If there have been rewards, there have also been problems. A peek into a confidential counseling session between Miss Good and an international student might look something like this:

With a calm dignity that is so naturally hers, Miss Good faces the young college student from Africa, "The guideline of the college is to discourage international students who are receiving tuition grants, to go home for the summer, even though their family back home has raised the money for the trip."

She wanted the best of two worlds

Among church and civic groups supporting international students at GC is the Goshen Rotary Club, which honored Miss Good at a luncheon last Feb. 18. Presenting Miss Good (center) with a certificate of appreciation for her part in building international friendship is Gene Duffin, Rotary president. Looking on is Lilliam Monge, a GC student from Santiago, Costa Rica, who presented the luncheon program. (Photo by Goshen News.)

She goes on to explain, "The college seeks gifts from church members, alumni, families in the community, and others, and gives receipts for income tax deductions for them. These gifts are given to us to help make possible the $2500 tuition scholarships that many international students need. It would be questionable stewardship of their gifts and of their trust to permit you to use the $1750 your family has sent for you to go back to Eastern Africa for the summer."

She pauses, then continues, "If you do choose to go home for the summer, the college will need to take a fresh look at the student aid you are receiving, and adjust the amount."

The student shows obvious disappointment. It is not at all difficult to feel once again the domination of a white. His people are struggling with feelings from years of colonial imperialism back in Africa. And this white is a woman, to boot. A woman would have no position to talk to a male like this in his homeland.

On the other hand, the student senses from past experience Miss Good had a deep interest in his personal welfare. She had met him at the Michiana Regional Airport at South Bend the day he arrived. She had been behind the scenes for months before his arrival, raising the necessary funds not only for tuition but also for room and board, filing the necessary visa and permit papers with the Immigration and Naturalization Service. When cold weather set in, she saw to it that a fellow on the same dorm floor took him downtown to Kline's and outfitted him with a heavy winter coat and hat.

Other challenges

Returning home after a year or two of college is only one of the thorny challenges Miss Good has had to face in her 20 years as advisor to international students. Loneliness can be a big problem. It is especially noticeable at Christmas vacation, when the campus is bleak, cold, desolate of students. The library even closes at 5 p.m. It is no wonder that some of the most enduring friendships are not between Americans and the international students, but between the international students themselves. Another challenge international students feel is the academic pressure. It is especially acute when their command of English is less than adequate. Miss Good taught a course specifically to help them.

Miss Good also notes another hurdle. International students who seek the opportunity to study abroad are, by virtue of this very fact, a rather adventuresome group. Small wonder then that some arrive with exaggerated ideas of how college is like in America, and when they look around Goshen, a typical midwestern city set on a prairie, their balloon pops.

Goal: Christian service

A purpose of the international program from the very beginning is to prepare the students for Christian service in their homelands. GC has never wanted to contribute to "the brain drain." Yet, Miss Good has witnessed several who became so acclimated to America that they applied for citizenship and stayed in this country.

"In some cases, there were good reasons," Miss Good reflects. "One student's family had been uprooted and fled its home country, never to be able to return. It is not surprising that a person who had undergone such a traumatic experience would choose to live in America." When last researched Goshen's average of returnees was considerably better than the national average.

Among the many who have been contributing so much to their homelands are Kodwo Ankrah, graduate of '58; while serving as African refugee secretary for the World Council of Churches in 1969-1974, he helped bring peace to the Sudan, after a 16-year civil war between the north and south. (Incidentally, Kodwo came to GC with some high school deficiencies requiring special consideration for admission. His first contact with the Mennonites was through the Words of Cheer, a Sunday-school paper for juniors now known as On the Line.)

Another is Bernard Muganda, graduate of '65, special assistant to the ministry of foreign affairs in Tanzania. He is in New York whenever the U.N. General Assembly is in session. (Incidentally, during his Goshen days--this was before 1974 when U.S. Immigration ruled that international students could not work off campus without special permission--he was an orderly at Elkhart General Hospital. He was probably the first black orderly to work there, and he created such a favorable impression it paved the way for American blacks to gain employment there.)

Adolfo Comba, graduate of '48, is with the general directorate of external relations, European Economic Community. He was one of the pioneers of the EEC Commission, which began in 1958, and has been with EEC ever since. His base is New York City.

Church leaders are numerous. They include Pyarelal Malagar, graduate of '49, in India; Takio Tanase, graduate of '70, in Japan; Jan Matthijssen and Meindertze Kuitse, alumni of '48, in the Netherlands; and Bishop Paulos Mar Gregorios [T. Paul Verghese, graduate of '52], serving the Orthodox Church of India.

Admired by colleagues

Miss Good's faculty colleagues admire her for what she has done. Goshen College awards 28 full-tuition scholarships yearly, plus about $35,000 in room-and-board. Because of the 1974 U.S. Immigration rules prohibiting employment of international students off campus, Miss Good has worked harder than ever to corral gift support so that the program can continue.

As one faculty admirer told the Bulletin, "She extended the yeast. She took what the administration gave her, wrote good low-key letters, and brought in gifts from many sources to keep the program in 'the black.' She kept a watchful eye on the resources of each student. She even developed an annual 'cushion' credit account, from which disbursements could be made at year-end to settle up the neediest of the outstanding accounts. And she did all this on a part-time basis."

Although some students criticized such a guardian approach to their personal finances, the fact remains that in the U.S., many international student programs have floundered because of inadequate attention to finances.

The value of international students in the community

By Donna Klein

Through the international students at Goshen College, the people in the Goshen community have the opportunity to grow in their understanding of other nations and cultures. Many families have had their lives enriched through friendships with these students.

International students can feel part of the community as they learn about our industries, educational systems, volunteer work and many American customs. They also have the opportunity to be in American homes, join in family life and make contacts that last after they return to their own countries. These are things that are missed by many foreign students in large universities.

I quote some statements made by students as their ideas of Americans changed -- "I came, not sure I would find you friendly because of our differences, but I find we are much alike with the same problems, joys and sorrows." "You have so many things but you work hard for them." "After seeing the value of being invited into American homes while I was in Goshen College, I spent a summer getting foreign students in a big university in my city into homes."

Mrs. Robert Klein has helped in the international student program since 1957, including writing letters to new students before they arrive and helping to raise financial support. During her world travels, she has returned the friendship by visiting in the homes of those who visited her as students.

Miss Good has influenced the lives of numerous students as she has helped them in many personal ways. Her friendship and concern for them has gone beyond her duties as advisor to international students. She has given me the opportunity during these last 20 years to share in welcoming students into the community and into my home. Whether it was a student spending a few days in my home before settling in the dorm, or a few students cooking their national foods in my kitchen, or 25 eating a buffet supper with me, it has been an unforgettable privilege.

I would recommend that American students in Goshen College, families in the Goshen community and foreign students use every opportunity they have to make these ties of international friendship.

'Thank you, GC and Miss Good,' international students write

Zenebe Abebe

I have a great respect for the Goshen College community. For me, Goshen was a place where I nourished my intellect's needs, where I developed knowledge of understanding others, where I learned to respect others' values and appreciate their culture, and most of all, a place where I discovered the hidden part of myself, my spiritual self.

Michiko Akasaka and pupils

Cathy Fast [now Everingham], my roommate, was terrific as were all the other people in the dorms, in my classes, in the international club . . . America truly seems to be the meeting place of West and East . . . and it was Miss Good who brought this feeling to me . . . I am the one who is the most lucky, I think, because I was given and received the most valuable thing--Christian faith . . . many helped and supported me to come to a commitment to Jesus as Lord of life and Leader of God's people. I was baptized May 21, 1972, in the college plaza.

Marta Quiroga de Alvarez

I had come from Argentina to attend a world conference on Christian education in Toronto and found myself with the opportunity, suddenly, of remaining a year to study subjects related to my interest, Christian education, at GC. . . . I arrived at GC with my sole possessions--two medium-sized suitcases. . . . Miss Good and her missionary sister, Edna Good--my roommate--met me at the door. . . . It was a year of rich experiences for my personal life. . . . I hold a very grateful memory and profound admiration for Christian ladies of the kind that Miss Viola Good represents.

Kodwo E. Ankrah

In classes and out of classes, one became aware that it was not just enough to acquire knowledge and skills. For someone like me who had knowledge of what an educated elite was expected to be, in the context of the Third World, and especially, as a Ghanaian with unique understanding of how a "been-to" should behave, the four years in Goshen debunked my preconceived notions of what an educated elite ought to be and do. Instead, GC filled me with a new orientation, insights and understanding of a full life. As the college motto spells it out, it telescoped for me a new life conceived in "Culture for Service," contrary to what was and is the prevailing aim of many of my contemporaries in Africa and the Third World--"Cultured to Be Served.". . . In all this I do not forget Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Otto, of Nappanee, who in consultation with others like Simon Yoder, of Goshen, and the late Maynard Hoover were thoroughly persuaded by Miss Good to sponsor a foreign student at GC. May God bless all of them.

--Kodwo E. Ankrah '58, Ghana
Provincial Planning and Development Advisor, the Church of Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and Boga-Zaire

I have a lot of pleasant memories of GC. . . . I shall never forget the dear people I met there. The foreign students I met there gave me abundant ideas about their countries and people. . . . I enjoyed many programs the college provided for us, especially the evangelical trip during the Easter vacation. For each thing I am obliged to Miss Good for her careful preparations and kind guidance.

Toshi Inoue Arita

Miss Good, while you were in Japan to teach at International Christian University in Tokyo, we had the privilege of having you stay with us overnight. I was tied up with the children, two-months-old baby and 1½-year-old boy. So my husband took a day off and showed you around Hakone, which is noted for its scenic beauty. At the top of Mt. Hakone from which you could view Mt. Fuji, you said, "When I see such beautiful landscape, I think of the Creator. I am glad you are a Christian." My husband had been a Christian for only a year then, but . . . he keeps telling me that your words spoken very slowly against the graceful sight of Mt. Fuji impressed him deeply and are still vivid in his mind.

Geraldine Chan

I particularly remember a light moment when a group of us "culinary talents" celebrated August Mom Festival in her home. The chicken was under-cooked in that less-than-successful dinner we concocted together. However, dear Miss Good bravely finished her portion of it.

Angela Chang

Goshen College has given me so much meaning to my life . . . Miss Good, you were a wonderful residence hall housemother to us and a good administrator.

--Angela Weng '58 Chang, Taiwan

Note to Readers:

Because of space limitations, excerpts from 27 letters from international student alumni could not be included in this issue. Because of the deep feelings of gratitude toward GC and Miss Good these alumni want to share with Bulletin readers, the excerpts will be printed in the August issue.—Editor.

The cost of a program for international students

By Daniel Kauffman

Daniel Kauffman is director of college relations. His office is responsible for raising about $1.7 million a year from private (non-government) sources.

As the Bulletin goes to press, the close of the fiscal year (June 30) is about six weeks in the future. However, it is not too early to project what the statement of operations for the international student program will likely be:

Projected Income, International Student Program, 1976-77

Designated gifts[1]	$ 35,242
Support from operating budget	71,258
Total	$106,500

Projected Expenses, International Student Program, 1976-77

Full-tuition scholarships (28)	$ 65,000
Room, board, essential living expenses	35,000
Office of international students (salaries, wages, fringe benefits, supplies, postage)	6,500
Total	$106,500

[1]A list of donors is published in tribute to those persons, groups, and organizations who made gifts to this year's international student program, elsewhere in this issue.

As a church-controlled institution without public subsidy, Goshen College is almost entirely dependent on income from tuition and from annual, capital, and special and deferred gifts. International students, however, provide little tuition income, since most of these students come with few resources. They are, however, deeply motivated, well-qualified, and highly recommended by persons known and trusted by the college.

The burden for the program, then, falls on the operating budget. A percentage of the annual budget is met by individuals, families, and church and community organizations. For this GC is deeply grateful. These designated gifts for international students added to support from the operating budget meet the program's needs. Annual gifts are lifeblood and highest priority--not only for the international student program, but for all programs.

However, suppose one wished to guarantee the future of the international student program, that is, suppose one wished to decrease the amount needed to be raised each year to meet the obligations as well as to maintain program quality.

Then gifts for endowment are needed. Endowment, a layer of income producing capital, would provide for continuous year in, year out support. In the current institutional development program a $1 million goal is set for scholarships for international students. Gifts for endowment come in the form of cash, by bequest or through a deferred gift where the donor has income benefits as long as he or she lives.

Such support--whether funded through annual giving or through endowment--can have wide-reaching effects and benefits. International students touch not only the lives of students who are in college when they are, but are also inclined to touch many, many more in their positions of responsibility upon return to their home country.

THE 1977 ALUMNI HONOR ROLL

Fiscal responsibility as fact and symbol

J. Lawrence Burkholder

Almost invariably the first question foundations ask when approached for a grant is: "How did you come out financially last year?" Foundations ask this question for the obvious reason that they prefer not to pour money into a sinking ship.

But one gets the impression that being in the black is a symbol that stands for more than fiscal responsibility. It seems to symbolize, however imprecisely, a general condition of well being. It seems to say something about such indirect factors as the quality of administration, the excellence of teaching, the support of the constituency, the identity of the institution and the morale of the students and the faculty.

Here at Goshen we wish to avoid inordinate emphasis on meeting our budget. There is more to education than paying the bills. But we take very seriously the need to live within our means. To treat fiscal matters irresponsibly is not only imprudent but also in violation of a serious expectation, if not sacred trust, which has been bestowed upon us by all who have invested their concerns, prayers and money in the college.

Goshen College operates on a slim margin. Almost every year since I have been president, we have budgeted a modest deficit. But every year we have come out in the black. Invariably we have made it because of careful management, faculty restraints and increased giving. This last year was the toughest year so far but we made it once more—thanks especially to your excellent support.

A glance at "High Lights of 1977 Giving" (see Page 5) will indicate progress in almost every category. Alumni contributions for operations were up 28 percent; alumni designated gifts were up 21 percent. From all categories, alumni giving was up 37 percent. The number of alumni making a gift was up 23 percent. It should also be pointed out that giving from other sources and especially the churches was up significantly.

The pattern of giving to Goshen College in recent years is most encouraging. In behalf of the faculty and students, I wish to express our most sincere thanks.

J. Lawrence Burkholder

Class report 1977

A word of explanation about this table: The honor roll of names in this issue recognize all alumni givers, whether the gift was received for the 1977 Alumni Fund for Quality Teaching or for a special, designated purpose. However, this table includes only the gifts for Quality Teaching, the theme of the 1977 Fund. The number of givers, the total amount of gifts and percentage of participation reflect only gifts from alumni to the 1977 Fund.

Thirty-five classes broke past records in percentage of participation in the 1977 Alumni Fund and set new all-time highs.

We want it to be right

Every effort has been made to be accurate in the preparation of the many honor rolls of contributors to the 1977 Fund for Quality Teaching, the honor roll of volunteers, and the statistical summaries.

If your name has been omitted, or if it or other information is listed incorrectly, the Office of Alumni Relations and the Bulletin staff hope you will be understanding and report the error and the correct information.

The lists published here were prepared in early July. Since that time, a number of contributors have married, remarried or died. Again, the staff trusts you will understand the original information.

Honor roll for 1978 now under way

The fiscal year for Goshen College is July 1 through June 30. If your gift was intended for the 1977 Alumni Fund but was received after July 5, 1977, it is being counted in the 1978 Fund for Quality Teaching.

The college's auditors require the books to be closed during the first few days of July. However, gifts received through July 5 in response to last year's alumni fund effort were counted in the 1977 fund.

If you would like to join the 1978 honor roll, all you need to do is make a gift to Goshen College through the Alumni Fund.

The 1978 Fund is being conducted during the college's fiscal year, July 1, 1977, through June 30, 1978. All gifts received during this 12-month period will be listed on next year's honor roll.

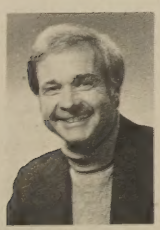
Your gift may be cash, a check, or in the form of securities, real property, objects of art, or books. When the annual report for 1978 is published, your name will be listed but not the amount of the gift.

Remember, every gift of any sort or size is deeply appreciated and promptly acknowledged.

Joe Yoder to head 1978 fund

Joe D. Yoder '51, West Jefferson, Ohio, will chair the 1978 Fund for Quality Teaching. He has been a member of the Alumni Association Board for the past two years.

Joe and his wife Jean (Greider) have three sons and a daughter. Son Peter will be a freshman at GC this year.



Joe D. Yoder '51

After GC, Joe studied at Ohio State College of Agriculture. He has been a farmer for 24 years, and during that time has been involved with the health board, Soil and Water Conservation and Farm Bureau Federation. The family is actively involved at South Union Mennonite Church.

On the Alumni Board and its fund committee, Joe has been an enthusiastic supporter of GC. Because the college has been an important influence in his family, and he believes it is important to the Mennonite Church, GC is a priority concern for Joe.

Honor roll of churches making gifts in 1977

For the third consecutive year Goshen College publicly recognizes those congregations which made gifts from their stewardship program or from offerings during the college fiscal year ending June 30, 1977. Last year gifts totaling $328,119, for an increase of 34.7 percent, were received for current operations. The congregations are alphabetized within conferences.

Asterisk denotes congregation increased giving last year. The increase qualified for the dollar-for-dollar match by the Joyce Foundation.*

Allegheny

Makes allocations as a conference. GC therefore could not identify individual congregations which are contributors. Increased conference contributions qualified for Joyce matching funds.

Parents and friends send gifts

Many parents — of present as well as former students — and friends supported the Fund for Quality Teaching in 1976-77; others designated their gifts for a special purpose. The list below recognizes these non-alumni parents (alumni parents are listed with their classes) and friends.

	1977	Comparison	1976
Parents Fund contributors	274	+ 6%	258
Parents Fund gifts	$74,355	+50%	$49,439
Alumni parents contributors	224	+16%	193
Alumni parents gifts	$59,450	+53%	$38,781
Non-alumni parents contributors	50	−23%	65
Non-alumni parents gifts	$14,905	+40%	$10,658

Gifts from parents and friends in the parents and friends honor roll of names totaled $21,067.83.

Memorial and tribute gifts listed

During the past fiscal year 339 gifts from alumni and friends were received in the Memorial and Tribute Giving Program. Many such gifts, large or small, provide books for the library (with an appropriate bookplate naming the person in whose memory or honor the gift was made as well as the giver). Others are for scholarships, or for specific items in the Umble Center or other buildings on campus. Every memorial or honorial gift creates a lasting tribute at Goshen by insuring the quality of education for future generations.

Gifts to Goshen College memorialized or were in tribute to 20 alumni and 7 friends of the college in 1976-77.

	1977	Comparison	1976
Number of persons memorialized or paid tribute to . . .	27	−31%	39
Number of gifts	339	+135%	144
Total gifts	$21,085	+219%	$6,607

Volunteers give time and energy

Every volunteer — area meeting organizer, telefund caller, Alumni Association committee member, Parents Committee member, etc. — has a story that could be told. Their efforts produced much in the way of results last year. If one story must represent all, perhaps it is the "Chartres Story."

In the middle of the twelfth century the Cathedral at Chartres seemed to be rising by magic. Actually, it was due to the work of many faithful throughout France, who were so dedicated and so enthusiastic about expressing a great ideal in the construction of the building, that they came from far and near to harness themselves to the carts which brought stones from the quarries to the Cathedral.

True, Goshen College alumni live in a different time. But as each puts shoulders to the task and gives time, energies and skills according to one's means, it adds immeasurably to the cooperative effort and the significance of the dollars raised.

Support by deferred gifts and bequests

In 1976-77 21 alumni gifts and five friends established life income plans, made deferred gifts, or left a bequest to GC. The value of this giving totals $298,391, all to benefit GC. Through their actions, these donors have expressed their personal faith in the future quality of education. The growing importance of deferred giving was again demonstrated vividly, and late in the 1977 Fund year (which closed June 30), a class bequest organization was launched to encourage gifts by will.

Telefund netted over $46,000

Between April 18 and April 28, nearly 2,900 GC alumni, parents and friends were telephoned in the 1977 Alumni Association Telefund.

Behind the scene organizing the effort from his home was the late Howard Zehr '41, of Elkhart. Howard, although terminally ill, was pleased to be responsible for the details of asking Elkhart County alumni to take part in the effort. His own limited strength, however, prohibited him from doing any of the calling in the Telefund or in making any public appearances on the Telefund evenings.

In addition to alumni, students, parents and faculty and staff were also volunteer callers. As can be seen in the table below, total gifts directly attributable to the Telefund were $46,267, well above the $40,000 predicted at the end of the calling (and as reported in the May Bulletin).

	1977	Comparison	1976
Calls scheduled	2,892	+55%	1,866
Pledges made	582	+92%	304
Total pledge gifts	$26,059	+74%	$14,969
"Maybe will give" gifts	166	+28%	130
Total "Maybe" gifts	$11,171	+41%	$7,928
Gifts from "No answer" calls	69	+15%	60
Total "No answer" gifts	$ 3,737	+56%	$2,396
Total Telefund gifts	$46,267	+62%	$25,293

Gifts reported above are directly attributable to the telefund or to reminders sent to telefund prospects.

If you want a year of college, consider a certificate program

Some persons do not want to go to college for four years. Other persons are mature, older adults who want a college experience but not the degree. Still others are enrolled at universities or state colleges but would like an opportunity to do part of their study on a Mennonite campus. Then there are those who may have gone to college several years ago, and would like to return, but not necessarily for a degree.

Answering the need of these persons is the One-Year Certificate Program, inaugurated this fall. Each is designed to make that one year of college significant.

Biblical studies

This program is designed for persons wanting a one-year program of study to understand evangelism, the Bible, the work of the church, and their own call from God seriously and in depth. The faculty includes former missionaries, writers of Sunday-school materials, authors of books and articles on doctrine and practice, and persons who have traveled and taught widely throughout the North American and overseas church.

Business administration

The one-year program is tailored to meet the special needs of the individual, whether a young high school graduate who has recently joined the family business, or the mature adult wanting a year of principles and experience under the business and economics faculty. The faculty have purposely specialized to meet the needs of the family-owned business, or the business with fewer than 200 employees. A one-year program can accommodate the Study-Service Trimester overseas, if desired.

Mennonite studies

A student choosing this program has two of the world's top resource collections on campus — the Mennonite Archives and the Mennonite Historical Library. Among those teaching the courses in the program are practicing churchpersons and working historians and sociologists. They include J. Howard Kauffman, co-director of the recent every member profile; Norman Kraus, traveling teacher under Mennonite Board of Missions and director of Center for Discipleship; Mary Oyer, executive secretary of The Mennonite Hymnal; and Theron Schlabach, currently writing the history of Mennonite Board of Missions. In addition, the editorial staff of Mennonite Quarterly Review, the Anabaptist-Mennonite research journal, is on campus.

International education

Faculty and about 250 students are beginning the 10th year of intensive encounter and experience in countries in the Caribbean area and Central America this fall. The Study-Service Trimester has directly involved 2,250 students in the past nine years, and one-third of the faculty who have taught three years or more. Greater than that, 54 percent of the faculty have served or studied in an overseas country. In addition to the Study-Service Trimester is a complement of international-related courses on campus.

Piano pedagogy

John O'Brien and Kathryn Sherer are two experienced piano educators. They have built an outstanding piano preparatory program serving about 100 pre-college pupils a year, furnished an electronic piano laboratory, and instituted an annual five-day workshop for piano teachers in June.

For more information

More information, details and application materials are available from the Director of Admissions. You are also welcome to visit the campus at anytime; please call in advance so that someone will be on hand to answer your questions. The phone is (219) 533-3161. Or you may use the coupon below.

Alumni may apply for White House fellowships

Applications for the fourteenth nationwide competition for the 14 - 19 White House Fellowships awarded each year, are now available.

Established in 1964 by President Lyndon B. Johnson, this non-partisan program is designed to give outstanding, rising young leaders one year of firsthand high-level employment in the Federal Government as well as a comprehensive educational seminar. In addition to their job assignments as special assistants to the Vice President, Cabinet Secretaries, and principal members of the White House staff, the Fellows participate in an extensive seminar program consisting of off-the-record sessions with top government and private sector leaders, journalists, scholars, and foreign officials.

The program is open to U.S. citizens. Employees of the Federal government are not eligible with the exception of regular members of the armed services. There is no occupational restriction. Those who have been selected have included scholars, engineers, corporate employees, academic professors and administrators, medical doctors, architects, local public officials, lawyers, oceanographers, a policeman, and a symphony conductor.

Proven leadership, intellectual and professional ability, high motivation, and a commitment to community and nation are the broad criteria employed in the selection process.

Application materials and additional information may be obtained by sending a post card to The President's Commission on White House Fellowships, Washington, D.C. 20415. Requests for applications must be postmarked no later than Nov. 15, 1977.

Calling all Indiana authors

A search for Indiana authors who have published works since 1967 and those who may have been previously unknown has begun in preparation for a third volume of Indiana Authors and Their Books. The criteria for inclusion in Volume III are (1) that a person was born in Indiana or has lived about half his life in the state and (2) that the books published consist of a minimum of 24 pages.

Information on all suggested authors should include their connection in Indiana, a complete list of all publication titles and, if possible, the date and place of publication, plus a brief biography of the writer or a reference to a biography in an existing publication. However, any information is welcome and should be sent. Please contact Donald E. Thompson, librarian, Wabash College, Crawfordsville, IN 47933.

The volume covering the period since 1967 will be a companion to the two earlier volumes, Indiana Authors and Their Books, 1816-1916, published in 1949, and Indiana Authors and Their Books, 1917-1966 published in 1974. The publisher was Wabash College.

It is easy to put off doing the things we ought to do. That's what happened to me. I had some good excuses; at least they sounded good. . . . So at last I'm getting around to doing what I knew I should have done a long time ago, that is, sending my contribution to the work of GC. . . . So, in spite of everything, I do not give grudgingly; it is a pleasure.

Jane E. Golightly '47

It's a bad disease to think that because we are a part of a church program "the money is out there, all we have to do is plan, organize and go after it." Spend worthily and eyes can be opened to see. Quality education could include more emphasis on thrift, a great virtue.

'Thank you, GC and Miss Good,' international students write

Excerpts of letters from international student alumni in tribute to Miss Good and GC that could not be printed in the special July issue are concluded in this issue.

James Chen

I was probably the most complicated foreign student ever admitted in GC history. I went through a serious operation on my hip joint, and I stayed at the college infirmary for six months. During this period, Miss Good arranged and raised funds not only for the operation, hospitalization and infirmary fees, but also gave me a spiritual life of which I was baptized as a Christian. Through Miss Good's assistance, I was able to take Prof. Winey's accounting and economics courses. Spiritually, I was helped by the Rev. and Mrs. John Mosemann with their patronages and study of Christianity . . . it was just like a dream. I am very thankful to Miss Good for her kindness and great assistance.

Anne Comtesse

School life in France had been rough at times for the lonely Protestant girl I was. Already in kindergarten the rumor had been spread that I would go to hell for I was not baptized. My Goshen year was a "fellowship special." I consider it a rare privilege to have been received in faculty homes and adopted in various student groups. I have some vivid memories of many informal get-togethers. Miss Good will recall those lively foreign student parties in her little apartment in the dorm. No language barriers when we played Blockhead and our counselor did share in our international laughters. . . . During my more recent studies in speech therapy I learned about infra-verbal communication. Miss Good did not know all foreign languages but she knew how to catch messages that could not always be expressed in words.

Anni Dyck

Up to this day I regret that I did not take Dr. Mary Oyer's course in art appreciation. And whatever did make me sign up for voice? I found myself in Prof. Yoder's studio practicing hymns and singing "The Lotus Flower," and he was not pleased with my German accent. And yet it was he together with Dr. Roy Umble who helped me most with clear pronunciation. Till today my fluent use of the English language has been a great advantage to me. But regarding my future work as writer and editor of children's materials Dr. Mary Royer has had the deepest influence on me. I found it hard to take notes in her class. But what she taught me about childhood and how to serve children lovingly according to their needs is still with me today.

Ramzi Farran

I am thankful to Miss Good and the college community for making it possible for me to receive an education. The opportunity to learn in a caring environment has made it important to me to teach my high school students in the same caring way. The opportunity I had to work with various college and community personnel helped me to understand the value of working together for common good. The interpersonal involvement with all students on campus assisted me in my development as an individual. Through these relationships I could be me and not "a foreign student."

--Ramzi Farran '68, Israel

My first year on campus was painful. I had to adjust to a new educational system, to a new language, to a new set of people, and even to the cold weather. Fortunately, my professors showed great patience with my first efforts in English composition and the weather during my first winter at GC was unusually mild. However, the human aspect of my adaptation proved to be most difficult. I realized that if the students were always friendly and willing to talk with me, they never allowed our relationship to go beyond mere "friendliness.". . . . After the first early disappointments, I probably would have withdrawn into the small circle of fellow international students if my relationship with Betty and J. B. Shenk and with Miss Good had not maintained my confidence in the college community. Betty and J. B., whom I call my Goshen parents, offered me a home and a feeling of security and comfort. In their home I spent many of the happiest moments of my life at GC. Miss Good's encouragement to keep reaching out to others also helped me very much during my difficult moments.

Lawson, Gathoni and Rose Gachire

I travelled all the way from Africa to get an academic knowledge in business. Going through college was not all roses. There were times when things were pretty difficult and rough. There were times I felt like giving up. But my professors were honest and humble, and gave me all sorts of encouragement. As a business major my closest associates were Dr. Carl Kreider and Dr. Delmar Good. . . . All those who contributed to my achievement I owe an immense debt of gratitude.

Roy Hodgson

During the time I spent at Goshen, I saw new horizons in my life. Most of my confusion disappeared. There was something new. I discovered that I wanted to be more Christian. . . . In everything that happened to me at Goshen, there were outside forces that helped mold and shape the Me as I am at this moment. This Me is always open to growth. I am very grateful to Miss Viola Good who took a deep concern in the foreign students. . . . I am also grateful to the faculty for their patience with us.

--Roy Hodgson '74, Nicaragua
Doctoral student in educational psychology, Loyola U.

In the fall of 1957 I came to Goshen after having spent one enormously homesick and disappointing year at Hesston. I was in the grip of a double cultural shock, so to speak. Having grown up in large metropolises in China and Japan, I found the isolation of a small Midwestern town stifling and the insulated Mennonite sub-culture even more alien than the general American society. My own immaturity and inexperience in adapting to a new environment of course did not help the matter any. Hence, hope as well as apprehension accompanied me as I sought for a change at Goshen.

But my fear of finding Goshen in just as provincial a setting was soon put to rest by the programs planned by Miss Good. From the very beginning of the school year she organized outings, retreats, and various activities that brought the international students together for mutual support. Drawing from the strength of a cohesive and intimate group prepared me to cope with the painful aspects of being a "foreign" student. I was hungry for other international students' word of advice or their experience. It was comforting to know, for example, that even European Mennonites felt the same degree of alienation I did. Miss Good also provided opportunities, often in her own living room, for us to interact with faculty members who had either taught and travelled in foreign countries or had shown interest in the international student program. As a result I gained greater appreciation for the Mennonite Church by having its faith explained to me and its beliefs exemplified by these dedicated members of the church. It lost much of the ingrown character I had perceived earlier. Needless to say such close associations with the faculty also greatly enriched my academic experience. In time I began to see that the international student body was the privileged group having more close contacts with the faculty than the majority of the students. This is truly the greatest strength of the program.

Miss Good not only drew on the resources within the college but also opened up channels for the international students and the local citizens to mingle in cultural exchanges, which became a valuable part of our education. Observing the family life and civic organizations of an average town soon made me realize that the real strength of America lies in these wonderfully warm, interesting, and vital people. They embody the virtues that have given continuous health and spiritual sustenance to this country. My friendship with some of those townspeople has continued to this day. As I look back to those years I often have the feeling that I had once been in the heart and bosom of the real America. Some of these friends are still involved with the international students through Miss Good's encouragement.

But these professional and administrative achievements still pale beside Miss Good's one great gift. She has the ability to establish a very personal relationship with each individual student. Although I am aware that not all international students feel equally close to her, the small circle of Chinese students who were my contemporaries found in her a confidante, a counsellor, and friend who was always ready to listen to our problems and difficulties as well as hopes and joys. One never felt that she was judgmental or formulaic in her approach. She respected each student and his/her unique background. Years later when another alumna and I reminisced our Goshen days, we both commented on how broad-minded and accepting Miss Good had been toward us. It is a great gift to be able to turn an official position into a supportive role founded in Christian love. This has to be Miss Good's greatest accomplishment surpassing the thousands of dollars she has raised for the program.

Miss Good and Goshen College deserve the highest praise for having instituted a fine program for international students. May its excellent traditions continue to nurture the lives of many in the years to come.

Yasuko Ichikawa

My life at GC started under a kind of poor condition, with my inadequate language skill, the sudden change of the natural and human environment, ignorance about Goshen's philosophy, and no acquaintance except Miss Good, though it was simply caused by lack of my preparation. So, at the beginning, the casual atmosphere of her English practice class helped me feel easy about the strange surroundings, which was what I needed most then. . . . I appreciate her consideration for even a one-year student on the personal as well as the official level. Also, I'm so grateful for her kindness to my family who didn't understand English at all, and who relied on her from afar.

I did not hesitate to go to Miss Good whenever I needed help. After an error on my part, when others were most concerned about rules that had been broken, Miss Good was more concerned about me than the rules, and she supported me as I tried again. . . . I am impressed by how much energy and work she devoted to the international program, which stems from her Christian spirit and the ideal of brotherhood for mankind that she believes in.

I am indebted to the Moyer family in Souderton, Pa., who made it possible for me to come, and made my dream quality. They took care of me, prepared me financially, socially and psychologically to face new life in the States. . . . My exposure to the church was a transforming experience. In the church I found a fellowship of people who truly expressed love and concern for one another, whereas rigid formality characterizes many churches. . . . I was particularly impressed by the simple lifestyle of the entire college community. I will always cherish some of the great times I had in homes and families around Goshen.

The year at Goshen College was a very precious experience for us. We value the academic benefits, but we received much more than just "book learning." We met so many fine Christian people, professors, teachers, leaders, ministers, missionaries and the hundreds of students who were to be the leaders of tomorrow. It was an enriching year. Though for all students coming to college is a new experience, for us as foreigners (in this case coming directly from the bush of Paraguay) it was an overwhelming experience. What should we have done without a loving hand, understanding guidance, sympathetic help, and friendship? This was provided at GC by Miss Good (who's as good as her name). She never tired to listen to our big and little problems, she helped find work, or a doctor when ill, she helped plan entertainment, . . . she helped us feel at home.

Students always have difficulties getting oriented to a new campus and this is especially true for students from other countries. Miss Good was an exception in her personal attention and endeavor for me and other students in helping us to adjust and feel more at home. Each time I am in the Goshen area, I look forward to visiting with Miss Good. I treasure her enduring interest and friendship.

Leaving home to go to school in a strange country means leaving your family and friends behind, and learning to know a new culture, new people and a new way of life. For all of us at GC who found ourselves in this sometimes frustrating and lonely situation, Miss Good became the person who fulfilled our need for a sister, a friend, and an advisor.

Miss Good was concerned about my personality as a Japanese. I was moved with her deep insight to show the proper direction to each individual. One of the big high lights in my college life was being a member of an American family. As a Japanese girl who left home thousands of miles away, nothing was better than having a home. I learned what Christian life really means since then.

My recollections go back to 1946, and arrival in Goshen, after a long nightly train ride from Akron, Pa. It is a shame to confess that I fell asleep during the first meeting with the president, Ernest E. Miller, immediately after our arrival. . . . Miss Good helped with practical directions and advice. . . . It was quite a transition, from an independent working woman to a member of a boarding school population with several, not always understood, rules and regulations. But Miss Good was there to smooth matters over. . . . It was a job, after five years of oppression and war, to enter into a world where the windows could be opened and the voice of the world could be heard. . . . It was remarkable this college world of abundance, after several years of scarcity. . . . It was a privilege--this encounter with the Mennonite college-world, where students got their education in order to swarm off into the world, where their training and capacities were needed so much. . . . It was a high light to come into a more than superficial contact with many co-students and then sisters and brothers--contacts which resulted in many cases in lasting friendships for which I am still thankful.

I came to GC 26 years ago from Osaka which was scorched earth. People were just coming out of hunger. I was convinced that war must be prevented. But must it be done at the cost of personal freedom and the freedom from foreign domination? . . . A solution for peace is not easily found. However, there is a faint hope that if we really try to understand each other well enough, ultimately peace might come. I was selected by GC as one of the first students from Japan. I felt privileged and at the same time I was aware of my responsibility. I was determined to find answers to peace. Also, I was determined to promote mutual understandings, which appeared to be the only hope for peace. . . . GC turned out to be an ideal place for my pursuit. It provided me two years of secure life in that I could concentrate on my study. I received personal attention from the professors on the subjects of my study, which were mostly on humanities and which would have been very difficult otherwise. Today, as 25 years ago, peace may appear as far away as ever. However, a steady progress has been made in our daily life. For example, in the industrial and scientific community where I work, there are many more people of varied backgrounds, a fact which indicates people are much more willing to live together peacefully. The international student community at GC might be regarded as a prototype experiment for peace. Such an experiment is not an easy one, because it requires a sponsor, who is willing to be involved with compassion, patience and understanding.

My learning experience was not in classes alone. Actually the academic learning was not so easy because I had to compete with students whose language is English and whose understanding of a certain subject was superior to mine. But the learning I attained about life just by being in the college was very valuable. . . . GC made maps of countries meaningful. I learned to know wonderful people from West, East, Middle East, South America and Africa. When I hear about countries on the news I think of friends and cannot be indifferent.

Mennonite Mission in Ethiopia, Addis Ababa

People are persons at Goshen, not just numbers. I learned a lot from my American families, the Forsythes of Goshen, the Gingrichs of Freeport, Ill. For financial and academic problems Viola Good never failed to find a solution. . . . Personal observations of students and staff -- teaching and non-teaching at GC gave me a lot of inspiration. I definitely got affected. I admired Goshenites' devotion to duty and being humble. . . . I admired agriculture in America as a whole. One of my greatest satisfactions was doing my economics practicum on a farm with the Martins of Wakarusa. . . . Yet my sky at GC wasn't without clouds. Mennonite nonviolence is still tearing me apart. I think much of black sufferings in Africa. I am still not quite convinced that violence is not the only way out. God help us all.

"Our mother" is the characterization I have always given to Miss Good because she really showed motherly care and interest in every single member of the international group. She was the first who wrote to me on behalf of GC. She was a personal friend beside being a teacher and an academic advisor. How often she patiently listened to my problems and helped me. How often she took it upon herself to drive me places. How often she arranged for me to have a job during school and summertime. How often she attempted to acquaint me with community people. . . . I learned so much about the American way of life, especially about that of the Mennonites and their belief in pacifism.

It took me quite a while just to get to know some things about the American lifestyle. I recall that not until my junior year did my conversation with my roommates and friends become enjoyable. . . . Yet in my biased opinion, I was fortunate to discover the American culture and society at a gentle pace with my attention on the positive value through GC and the Goshen community. My interaction with the American people in working, studying, playing, thinking, feeling have shattered a lot of my myths (Americans are superior) of my pride and prejudices (only we Vietnamese are able to appreciate the inner beauty). It was an unsurpassable learning experience. . . . Not being a Mennonite, I came to appreciate the rich heritage the Mennonites possess, their Christ-centered lifestyle and their ministry of peace and service. My incapability to separate the Christ-essence from the culture elements while I was learning to know the Mennonites led to much frustration and an uneasy feeling for me. Again, God used the fellowship of the small K groups, and of individuals--Miss Good, for one--to help me not only for better understanding of the Mennonite but for a better relationship with God Himself.

Miss Good is more than a teacher. She is our mother. She taught us not only in the classroom but also at home. She is the center of us international students. She molded us together to be one, to understand each other, to love one another, and to share with one another. . . . When I think of GC, Miss Good always comes to my memory, as does the Roman Gingerich family, who helped me come to study in the United States.

Lore Rittmayer

It is very likely that Miss Good in her long career as a foreign student counselor often had to deal with slightly surprised or even strongly disagreeing foreign students. . . . But I must confess, I was appalled by the fact, about which Miss Good as dean of women informed me on one of my first days, that I had to wear hose all the time, even in summer. For a country girl this seemed too much. Five years after the end of the war German women still considered hose a Sunday luxury, and as a schoolgirl I had run about in socks or barefoot. . . . Another trouble for me at GC was that as a freshman I could not read beyond "lights out" at 10 p.m. Fortunately, my roommate, Pat Lerch, a junior, had more rights from which I profitted. Besides, I soon acquired a method of reading under bedcover with a flashlight. I hope Miss Good will forgive me. . . . I owe it to Miss Good's permission to stay out one night so that I could attend a "Parsifal" performance at Bloomington, Ind., which was a good experience. I can now imagine that such decisions against the rules were not easy for Miss Good who bore the responsibility. I realized this when, on our way back from one of these weekend trips, we had a car accident, due to icy roads, in which happily no one was hurt. It must have been difficult sometimes to integrate foreign students with their wide range of backgrounds into the college community where a certain discipline is necessary. Yet perhaps there were too many unnecessary little rules at GC in those years, but they were usually handled with tolerance. The way in which GC allows criticism, introduces changes, and follows new visions has always convinced me of the vitality of GC as I keep watching it from this distance. . . . Had I met Miss Good only at GC she would perhaps never have become more to me than the dean of women, whom I respect and to whom I owe thanks. But since she came to see me in my student's days at Freiburg, Germany, sharing a simple meal in my small student's room and running for a train with me when we had spent too much time visiting a Black Forest farm house, she has become a good friend.

Fujiko and Deepak Samida

My original plan was to spend only a year at GC and return to Japan to complete college work but the rich experience on campus and the beautiful relationships with people made me want to continue studying. . . . In the fourth year of college I was involved in a K group. This unique experience of sharing and supporting each other was a predominant factor in my spiritual growth. With the help of its members, I could overcome some of my weaknesses and through their support I could deal with my problems.

My earliest memory of Miss Good is a stern face and a friendly voice behind her glasses and her desk. The task at hand was the selection of courses for my first semester. I assumed that my older age should qualify me for junior-level courses despite my lack of preparation and rudimentary knowledge of English. She explained patiently that passing a junior-level course does not imply credit for lower-level courses and that prerequisites had to be fulfilled prior to a course and not concurrently or afterwards. I explained that I had little time and no money and therefore wanted to get through as quickly as possible. After exhausting all avenues of persuasion, Miss Good finally saw that some knuckleheaded people had to learn the hard way. And so it was that I registered for algebra, trigonometry, calculus and physics all at the same time (when each was a prerequisite for the other), for organic chemistry instead of general chemistry, and for American history (with 1200 pages of outside reading although my knowledge of English barely plowed through the College Outline Series). Besides, concepts in American history were entirely foreign to me. Whoever heard of suing a railroad when in Brazil you were glad when the train arrived at all. I had obviously created quite an obstacle course for myself and fell flat on my face quite a few times. Miss Good was always there to pick me up without standing back and saying, "I told you so." She always had the best in mind. . . . Most of all she had a heart and a willingness to relate to us as individuals. . . . I remain sincerely grateful for all her efforts.

I frequently took advantage of Miss Good's open office door, not always to seek advice but just to talk to her. She was to me like part of my family, especially since she had visited my home on her return from a trip to Argentina. I am grateful for her encouragement during the time of adjusting and mastering the language. More than ever did I wish to look like a real Paraguayan as a better excuse for some of the foolish language mistakes. . . . Three years have passed since my graduation and often I long to relive those times for just a moment. My experiences at GC form an important stage in my life.

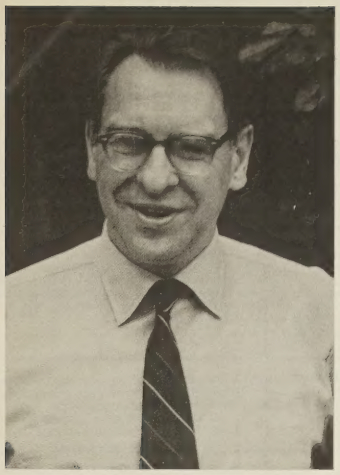
To the Church



No one these days needs to be reminded of the fact that the world is changing and that we are all changing with it. The acceleration of change seems irresistible. TV reruns of the 1960's seem like ancient history.

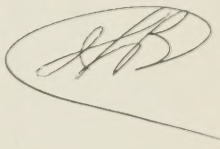
One result of rapid change is a feeling of uncertainty. None of us knows what the future will be like ten years from now. Many people seem edgey.

I would like to suggest that this is not the time to panic but to think and pray. We must re-examine what we really believe as Christians, what we want to hold onto, what values are eternal and what we need to do about keeping them.

In other words, we must make a distinction between unthinking reaction to change and enlightened conservatism. By enlightened conservatism I refer to recognition that certain realities which have been found to be right and true in the past should be passed on to our children albeit in other forms. Some new forms may appear at first threatening, but if thoughtfully and prayerfully chosen, their essence may be preserved.

Goshen College, as a servant of the Mennonite Church, is concerned about the impact that the world is having upon us. We believe that many values traditionally held to be precious and eternal are being threatened—honesty, marriage, fidelity, discipline, work, peace, non-conformity the simple life, the unequal yoke, faith and contentment. But we believe, in spite of everything, that these values can be transmitted to future generations—but only if we approach the problem consciously, thoughtfully and prayerfully, using all available intellectual and spiritual resources.

Here at Goshen we think of the college as a "conservative institution", not in the sense that we are against change but that we believe in the perpetuation of the best in our religious and cultural tradition. We also believe that a college such as Goshen is called to serve the Church as a place where values are examined thoughtfully from a Christian point of view, bringing to bear the study of theology, ethics, history, economics, etc. We believe that the college and the congregation need each other in discussing anew what it means to be faithful today when the foundations of all that we believe are being shaken. We have not thrown in the sponge — the world can, through the power and the wisdom of God, be "overcome."



We have focused this issue of the BULLETIN on a special subject: "The Times They are A-Changin'". Bob Dylan's words may be used to characterize the last decade — for Goshen College as well as for other members of the Christian academic community, and indeed for the world community as well.

To see how changing times effected change in college programs, and to anticipate changes for the future, we conducted a survey of GC department chairpersons, asking them five major questions:

1. What were the important developments in your field during the ten-year period of 1967-1977?

2. What developments are anticipated in your field for 1977-1987?

3. What are the implications of the anticipated developments for the Mennonite Church?

4. What are the implications of the anticipated developments for Goshen College?

5. What are the opportunities for GC grads in your field, given anticipated developments and implications?

Respondents were asked to answer the first two questions broadly — from the perspective of academia, of the world at large, and/or of the Church at large. The last three questions aimed at specific answers.

Departmental responses appear, rather like a written panel discussion, on pages 3 and 4.

Transition time — students of 1970

ACADEMIC FIELD AND REPRESENTATIVE	DEVELOPMENTS 1967-1977	ANTICIPATED DEVELOPMENTS 1977-87
BIBLE STUDIES Norman C. Kraus	In America both mainline denominations and established theological positions (e.g., neo-orthodoxy, liberalism) declined in significance, while various religious fads (death of God, theology of play, secular theology) rose and fell. Evangelicals demonstrated growing self-confidence and organizational push; and the charismatic movement added members and momentum.	Further work on recently-discovered ancient documents (Elba, Nag Hammadi) promises to demonstrate the distinctiveness of biblical people in their own time, and will enable better understanding of what it means to be a truly biblical people today. While theologians search for new roots, concerned Christians will face increasingly complex ethical decisions in such areas as medicine, the allocation of scarce resources, and response to diverse cultural and political options.
BIOLOGY Jonathan Roth	A. Better methods for food and energy production (i.e., farming and harvesting the oceans, better and safer pest control, use of alcohol to replace petroleum to run engines). B. The birth of recombinant (gene) research.	The further refinement of things mentioned in #1 with possible new applications in many areas, including such advances as the commercial production of insulin by recombinant bacteria, and increased production by the millions of small farms around the world.
BUSINESS Delmar Good	Enormous increase in information to solve problems, but new sense of limits on the behavior of business: e.g., end of taking growth for granted (resource limits); shifts in who holds economic power (international limits); demand for changes in "standard" business practices ("moral" limits); business responsibility in helping solve social problems (social limits); increased government regulation (domestic political limits).	A further blurring of the distinction between public and private economic responsibilities; further growth of giant firms, and at the same time a renewed interest in entrepreneurial activity (the family firm, e.g.); "everyday" use of computers in all types of business.
COMMUNICATION Al Albrecht	An increased interest in the importance and nature of interpersonal communications (one-to-one). This has produced many new textbooks, new courses, and research in interpersonal communication.	More scholars will be conducting experimental research to determine the effect of the variables in interpersonal communication. The general population will become more aware of communication in one-to-one relationships.
ENGLISH Erwin Beck	Reduced need for teachers on secondary and university levels. Growth of English as an international language. Public demand for mastery of language arts skills by students at all levels.	Fewer students enrolled in teacher education programs and in the graduate study of English. Increased acceptance of English as a second language by developing countries. Increased emphasis on literacy programs and accountability in language arts instruction in the U.S.
HISTORY John Oyer	There has been an enormous expansion of historical research into increasingly smaller, more specialized areas of time and geographical area, and a growing insistence that history incorporate some of the skills and insights of other social sciences, especially of psychology. Within sixteenth-century studies there has been an attempt to modify the control that theology has exercised in the field.	Probably an increase in specialization, toward even narrower fields, but also a decrease in the number of doctoral students turned out; persons with PhD's in history have had to find jobs outside the profession, so that they justify their graduate study on cultural-enrichment grounds, much as we used to justify the B.A.
Theron Schlabach	In interpreting American history, there has been a movement away from political and particularly economic explanations, and a corresponding inclination to take into account other motives, especially religious and ethnic. There has also been a major shift to gathering massive statistical evidence requiring computer processing. In Mennonite history there has been much questioning of the Bender school interpretation of sixteenth-century Anabaptism, and a new interest in the American Mennonite experience.	Probably there will be much further expansion of historical-research-by-computer, but content-wise some shift back toward conventional, even somewhat nationalistic political and power-oriented subjects. In Anabaptist-Mennonite studies, much further revisionism on "Anabaptist Vision" interpretations, but also much original interpretive ground-breaking for American Mennonite history.
HOME ECONOMICS Catherine Mumaw	World problems which call for response from home economists: rampant inflation, energy and food resources crises, quality of life concerns, consumer movements, greater consciousness of the global society and responsibility in that international community, growing gap between the rich and poor in the world, new patterns of household organization for family life, new discoveries in nutrition and its effect on growth and development of persons.	New patterns of international interdependence which will lead to new ways of sharing the world's resources; research and development of new energy resources which will alter forms of transportation and housing; more emphasis on health and the role of nutrition in its maintenance which will be reflected in national nutrition policies in nations around the world; new awareness of the church for its role in issues of justice and equality in the world, especially in relation to distribution of resources; more efforts to humanize education and to meet needs of a wider variety of the population; population control will continue to concern governments and will receive increasing attention.
MUSIC Doyle Preheim	A renewed interest in, and appreciation for, the arts nation-wide has been reflected in increased enrollments in art and music courses. In the church and at the college, instrumental music has been more and more accepted as another means of praising God. Publication of a new hymnal and the institution of the Festival has brought new excitement and joy to the worship of God through music. The proliferation of well-trained singers and instrumentalists has created a highly competitive situation in performance at the professional level. New technological advances have resulted in further explorations in the use of synthesizers and electronic music. A unique interest in various pedagogical methods in music (i.e., Suzuki, Orff and Kodaly) has emerged and is receiving the attention of persons concerned with learning theories in other disciplines.	There will be an even more crucial need for music "to lift persons above the mundane" routines of automated life. The Church will see further possibilities for using the arts for didactic purposes. With the realization of the international character of the Mennonite Church, a much deeper awareness of other cultures and their music will emerge. Employment opportunities may improve for elementary and secondary music educators, but remain limited at the college level. Further technological advances will affect developments in music.
NURSING Marilyn Leichty	Health care aimed towards optimum health for every person has been defined as a human right rather than a privilege. The focus on treatment of injury and illness is no longer accepted as an adequate concept of health care.	Health promotion will increasingly become the responsibility of the nursing profession. Nurses will be involved in assessment of health status of individuals and communities, will be sensitive to cultural differences in assisting people to discern their own health needs, and will provide nursing care or coordinate resources to meet those needs.
PHYSICAL EDUCATION Ruth Gunden	Growth of the "new physical education" in schools; mushrooming sports programs for girls and women, and co-ed classes as a result of legislation equalizing educational opportunities; "participation boom", stimulated in part by a heightened awareness of personal fitness; and emergence of scientists researching human performance.	Teaching the impaired in both regular and special physical education classes as well as a result of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act; a demand for new and varied movement opportunities by all levels and types in society; and emphasis in the profession upon the scientific and sociological aspects of human movement. International competition will affect the structuring and developing of sport in the U.S.
SOCIAL WORK David Harley	The development of the first professional social work degree at the baccalaureate level, following a model of the baccalaureate social worker as a generalist who utilizes an understanding of social systems in professional practice.	With continuing rapid social change, social workers will take increasingly active advocacy roles on behalf of those with little power in our society, including the growing group of aging persons and racial and ethnic minorities. Utilization of behavioral objectives in education and practice will be both vigorously defended and questioned within the profession.
TEACHER EDUCATION S. L. Yoder	Within the last decade, the Teacher Education Office moved into the lower floor of the Good Library. This educational wing houses the curriculum reading room, media center, learning resources center, and demonstration classrooms. Since 1973, all programs have been re-accredited by NCATE, NCA, and DPI. New programs have been added in vocational home economics, general science, and sociology. Overall enrollment in teacher education has declined slightly, reflecting the national scene in education.	The trend in teacher education points toward the specific. Licensing bodies are narrowing the scope and duration of teaching certificates. In keeping with the current policies in teacher education, Goshen is developing programs in early childhood education, kindergarten and primary, elementary, junior high/middle school, and secondary education. Specific new endorsements are in bilingual-bicultural education, family life education, coaching, and health and safety. Initial study has been done in an endorsement in special education. Continued efforts to prepare teachers on the basis of performance and competencies.

IMPLICATIONS FOR THE CHURCH	IMPLICATIONS FOR GOSHEN COLLEGE	OPPORTUNITIES FOR GC GRADS
Work out the implications of the Assembly '77 statement on biblical interpretation in light of new biblical research. Find new ways to embody communities of faith, discernment, and witness to counteract the constant threat of individualism and secularism.	Continue to assist the Church in self-understanding and identity by affirming its roots both in the Bible and history, and in its mission, by providing resources for addressing the problems of both church and world from a biblical perspective. This means increasing efforts at interdisciplinary and crosscultural study and dialogue.	There are many opportunities for lay leadership in the church: congregational leadership in church planning, nurture and teaching ministries, forming housefellowships for mutual discernment and support; educational positions in Christian elementary and high schools; assignments by service agencies, overseas and home mission agencies; religious publishing; and college/university/seminary careers. We see an increasing need for committed scholarship in crucial areas of church and world encounter.
Many service opportunities for individuals with adequate backgrounds. The need to speak to ethical questions such as drug use and abuse, and abortion, in light of our current knowledge in those areas. The church must become more active in encouraging and affirming young people at the congregational level concerning higher education opportunities in the church colleges.	G.C. should give students a wide background for living in our present and future world. It is important that personal judgment and perception be cultivated along with academic facts and data.	Adaptability is a must for the future, and we believe that our graduates will be prepared to move in any direction indicated by the current needs and opportunities. There have always been, and will continue to be, demands for dedicated persons to help unfold the mysteries of this world for the benefit of humanity.
Challenge to reassess members' involvement in policy-making institutions (public; quasi-public; private). Challenge to be a supporting and discerning brotherhood for individuals in a much broader and more diverse range of managerial responsibilities.	Basic skill courses must keep pace with developments in specific fields (computers, decision-making tools, etc.). Continued expansion of a business/management program with flexibility to gain skills for a broad range of positions. Emphasis on ethical issues involved in management. Emphasis on the social, and increasingly international, character of the "limits" on business.	Private business, church agencies, public institutions, and not-for-profit institutions—all have great need for administrators and managers who are sensitive and have integrity as well as skill. No lack of opportunity to serve.
A greater awareness of the importance of interpersonal communication, committee work, counseling, education, family life, and social relationships.	In the past those students who studied communication only studied public platform or small group communication. In the future, more students will also be studying interpersonal communication; thus, new course offerings and more students majoring in communication.	More teaching opportunities in high school and college as well as more opportunities in counseling in personal development and personal relationships.
Church agencies will be called upon to supply increasingly greater numbers of literacy workers and teachers of English as a foreign language. In the long run, church schools—particularly colleges—may find it difficult to staff their English departments.	While continuing its emphasis on literary study as a sensitizing, humanizing process, the English department will also give increased leadership in developing programs in creative and expository writing, in teaching English as a foreign language, and in setting standards for competence in writing for all students.	GC graduates will find increased vocational opportunities, with church and governmental agencies, in literacy programs and in teaching English as a second language. Despite the national situation, the request for English teachers trained at Goshen College remains strong, and students will continue to be encouraged to pursue programs in middle school and secondary English education.
Within the broader field of Mennonite Studies: (1) American Mennonite studies have increased in volume and become more anayltical, less descriptive; (2) Anabaptists have come under an increasingly critical scrutiny by non-Mennonite scholars, in a few instances reverting almost to the extremes of the nineteenth-century polemics against them; (3) There has been a sizable increase in the founding of local Mennonite historical societies throughout North America. The general interest in religious and ethnic history will offer opportunity for the Mennonite experience and convictions to be heard in some circles not previously attuned to the message. Ironically, however, that will come at a time when Mennonite scholars are apt to have lost some confidence in their own understandings because of the questions about "Anabaptist Vision" interpretation of sixteenth-century events, and because treatments of the Mennonite experience in America will refuse to ignore certain bleak episodes and certain naturalistic (as contrasted to "God's-chosen-people") explanations.	(1) An increase in activity within Mennonite Studies (including Anabaptism), both in respect to new courses offered, and in respect to the increasing number of students examining even recondite research problems within the field. (2) Less preparation of history undergrads for graduate work—except as an extension of cultural enrichment—and more preparation of students, via Mennonite Studies, to return to their congregations with a sense of Mennonite mission to the world. Goshen College's pre-eminence as a locus of interpreting Anabaptism will slip even further, and she will need to cultivate new cooperation with scholars elsewhere in the writing of both sixteenth-century Anabaptist and American Mennonite history. There will be a new imperative for her to put resources into Mennonite history scholarship, as befits a major intellectual center of a people.	Opportunities to examine the particular Mennonite mission afresh, with an eye, I would hope, to exploring new ways of living out that total vision. The decrease in tasks for the professional historian—tasks such as teaching—will probably level off. Employment opportunities in the whole field of history will probably cease to decline, but stabilize at a rather limiting level. The opportunities to do creative, even prophetic intellectual work in history, if graduates can find the economic base, will be as great as ever—and in the various phases of Anabaptist and Mennonite history, probably greater than ever.
The concept of the church as community should gain increasing attention and should involve discussion and action in relation to problems on a global scale where the church demonstrates its responsibility both to its members and its neighbors; a radical shift in life style should be expressed in terms of less material consumption so as to be enabled to share more resources with the less affluent, more involvement in programs designed to alleviate human suffering and injustice which may result in less monetary reward; improved management skills so as to be more effective in the use of material and human resources both within the church community and outside the community; improved human skills so as to achieve a quality of life which embodies the values espoused by the Christian way of life.	Programs to develop skills for participation in problem-solving through nutrition education and food production and use programs; for influencing public policy in issues affecting the quality of family life; for management based on Christian values; for consumer competence in coping with technological change and simpler life styles; and for effective citizenry in the global village.	Many traditional occupations will continue to be available to graduates; new opportunities will come in health-related occupations, consumer advocacy programs, international service as technicians in family life interests and health concerns, and advocacy for justice in community, state and national affairs.
The Church needs to continue its appraisal of the ways in which music and art can enhance its teaching ministry; in what ways the lives of its people can be enriched through this media. The Church will want to broaden its tastes to include the musical expression of other cultures. Increasing numbers of college graduates with music training will be available for work in church music leadership roles.	A new emphasis is emerging for part-time and volunteer involvement for persons with musical training. Both thoroughness and flexibility will be necessary ingredients in the training of church and school music educators. Specialized curricula, such as the one-year certificate program in church music, will be developed for persons with specialized interests and needs. We need to search for ways of integrating the exposure students receive to music of other cultures through SST and on-campus studies.	There will be continued opportunity for elementary, secondary and some college teaching in music. Excellent opportunities exist for creative involvement in church music leadership, although up to the present few paying positions exist in the Mennonite constituency. Musical training combined with seminary studies is a promising possibility. The exceptionally gifted performer may still find employment in a highly competitive performance in field. A co-major in music and business at GC would qualify students for employment in a variety of musically oriented businesses.
A church which has had concern to allay human suffering will be eager to accept the challenge to be involved in preventing suffering. This will mean providing health promoting programs and personnel in areas where this service is not presently available.	We will incorporate into our courses knowledge and associated skills which equip the graduate to function in a health promotion role. This will include focus on health;ability to determine optimum health potential for people, and skill in facilitating health-related activities.	Graduates will find careers in independent practice, and increasingly will seek employment in schools, industry, clinics and public health agencies where they will concern themselves with helping persons who are not defined as ill to realize optimum health. Nurses will continue to provide nursing care to the ill and injured in traditional hospital settings.
Growing respect for the role of exercise in the well-being of the whole person; appropriate concern for the care and health of the physical person in its stewardship teaching; and the sanctioning of movement for the joy of it.	Providing opportunity and support for exercise patterns that are satisfying to the individual student; strengthening professional courses in the scientific bases of movement with current equipment and concepts; adding materials relating to the handicapped, the very young and the aging; introducing work in settings other than schools.	There will be increased demand for coaches for girl's, women's, and co-ed sports, and expanding opportunities for activity leaders in all kinds of settings—school, community, camp, club, retirement center, industry, etc. With additional training, graduates can become researchers of human performance components.
The Christian social worker will need to examine spiritual and professional commitments in responding to the needs for social justice in society. The Mennonite Church will confront the challenge of accommodating the status quo as radical discipleship as a means of influencing Mennonite social workers in the choices and commitments they make.	Continuing emphasis upon educational excellence in social work education, combined with investment in developing throughout the curriculum the knowledge, values, and skills relevant for the professionally and spiritually equipped social worker.	Employment will be available for baccalaureate social workers; expect increased emphasis on graduation from accredited schools. Employment in the public and private sectors will remain high, and an increase is seen in the area of the aging, in both secular and church-related programs. Social workers will seek to aid church-related programs in expanding service to include advocacy roles in collaboration with other groups within the Mennonite church that seek a broader application of the "direct-service" motif.
A continued interest in Christian education mandates institutions of higher education to prepare qualified and certifiable personnel for Mennonite and other Christian schools. Goshen College gives the appropriate theological as well as professional preparation of teachers for church schools.	Initiating new programs and new courses in more specialized areas means additional preparation in these areas by current faculty and additional teaching staff with adequate preparation and competence in such specialized fields.	There is always a need for good, competent, dedicated teachers. Greater specialization will apparently be significant in tomorrow's job market. Teacher education graduates have many job opportunities in and out of the classroom, particularly in church programs at home and overseas, in community recreational programs, health and welfare programs, and family life education.

A SYMPOSIUM ON CHANGE

The way we were . . .

One sign of the changing times — at least for the BULLETIN — is the loss of our editor Merv Zook, who has joined Mennonite Mutual Aid. We'd like to take this opportunity to thank him for his truly outstanding contribution to Christian journalism and to wish him well in his new endeavors.

The more [some] things change . . .

The more they stay the same.

View From The Northeast Corner

Director of Alumni Relations — Alice Roth

The northeast corner, of the Administration Building, that is. If you hadn't visited the GC Alumni Office in recent years, you would remember this corner as the site of the piano practice rooms —or earlier yet, of the barbershop. Today the first snowflakes are blowing through the tops of the young trees in Schrock Plaza; the ivy on the Science Building is bare. That's the view from my high east windows. Standing up, I see students hunched into their windbreakers, dashing across the Plaza en route from Arts Building to Earl the Pearl's dining hall goodies.

In each newsletter edition of the Bulletin, I hope to give you a slice of the view, or a point of view, from my corner of campus. For today, this sampling of campus life as reflected in the headlines of this week's RECORD:

No longer behind closed doors — Faculty meetings are now covered by a RECORD reporter. The student writer comments on his first meeting, "A GC faculty meeting would seem, at first glance, to be a fairly digestible potpourri of specific items of campus business (like policy for excused absences) and the larger issues of Mennonite education."

GC jazz band plays tomorrow . . . Though some of the charts the group plays are relatively modern compositions, much of the music for the program is in the big-band style of Count Basie . . .

Next week to emphasize Indian land-use ethic — The week's program . . . partially funded by the Indiana Committee for the Humanities, will include workshops, films, displays, and two Indian speakers.

Loosen up spiritually — After a week on campus as Christian Life Week speaker, Richard Showalter commented, "I observed a reluctance to share personal faith except among good friends . . . Perhaps my one suggestion of change would relate to this: just loosen up a bit, be real."

Open-house policy challenged — A student asserts that the current open house "contractual community agreements" assume a kind of (theological) community that does not exist automatically on dorm floors. He calls the system "loyalty pledges under the pretext of community."

Would you like more information about any of these, or other aspects of campus life? Help us make the Bulletin your publication. The form on back page will facilitate your response.

SST in Nicaragua Again

This winter, for the first time since 1972, Goshen College will set up a Study-Service Trimester in the Central American nation of Nicaragua. Devon Yoder, assistant librarian, and his wife Marcia will lead about 20 students.

GC first opened an SST unit in Nicaragua in 1969. Since that time nine other units built the Nicaraguan SST into a strong program. In 1972, however, a severe earthquake wracked the country and no units have been based there until this year.

Fall SST'ers now on location in Haiti, Belize and Costa Rica return to Goshen Dec. 19.

For Healthy Minds and Bodies

A Health Fair at Goshen College Oct. 7, coordinated by GC nurse practitioner Diane Kropf, attracted between 1200 and 1500 campus and community people. Over 40 Northern Indiana agencies set up displays representing concerns in alcoholism, child abuse, anemia, weight control, the environment, parenting, and many other subjects. Other features included health screenings, movies, and an evening session in creative exercise. All facets of the fair focused attention on a healthy lifestyle.

Voices From the Limberlost

GC student Deborah Dahlke-Scott developed a project on land-use ethics this fall which has resulted in wildlife photo exhibitions, nature walks with trained naturalists, and public forums on earth care. In her project, entitled "Land-Use Ethics . . : Voices from the Limberlost," Deborah used writer/naturalist Gene Stratton-Porter as a historical example of how one woman's writing and art affected the ecological consciousness of her time and ours. A workshop on "Land and the Medicine Wheel" Nov. 16 featured Native Americans Ted Risingsun and Howard LaHurreau. Deborah's project was funded with a matching grant from the Indiana Committee for the Humanities.

Mennos and Evangelicalism

Discipleship Forums dealing with Evangelicalism and Anabaptism are being presented by the Center for Discipleship on scattered Mondays through March. J. Lawrence Burkholder gave an opening lecture Nov. 28, "What Is Evangelicalism?" and J. C. Wenger spoke Dec. 19 on "The Battle for the Bible—The Inerrancy Controversy Within Evangelicalism." Remaining Forums to be held January 23; February 6, 13, and 27; and March 6, will be led by C. Norman Kraus, Marlin Jeschke, John A. Lapp, Wes Michaelson, and Ronald J. Sider. The Forums run from 3:30 to 9 p.m. Participants may receive credit in continuing education. Registration for individual forums can be made by calling the Center for Discipleship at (219) 533-3161, Ext. 310.

Introducing Student "I" Groups

"I" groups ("I" stands for "integration") are giving GC freshmen a chance to interact with other College people for academic, social, personal, and spiritual growth.

Designed by personnel in the Student Development Division, the "I" groups contain ten students and are led by a campus or community adult. The Student Development Division is considering several different approaches to the "I" group this year; for this reason, the number of individual and group meetings may vary for each freshman. All groups, however, share similar objectives: to introduce the student to the college community, to focus and sharpen individual goals, to ease the transition from home to college, and to integrate various dimensions of campus life.

"I" group leaders, according to coordinator Fred Litwiller of the Student Development Division, are able to refer students who need help with specific concerns to counseling specialists on campus. Their major goal is to make it easier for students to chart their own development — spiritually, socially, personally, academically—begining at their present levels of achievement in each area and aiming for growth to reach more advanced levels in time.

A Thought

Mary Bender and Mary Oyer tied Joan Baez as the most admired woman in a poll taken in Shirley Showalter's class "Womanhood in America."

Mary Bender's response — "Oh my, we're in worse trouble than I thought!"

GC Alumni, Friends Tour New York Galleries

Fifty persons joined Professor Abner Hershberger for GC's first New York City art seminar and gallery tour, conducted October 21-23. Participants' comments on the weekend:

"... just wanted to let you know that I enjoyed the NYC trip tremendously! I wish it could have lasted longer; we crammed so much into such a short time ... a couple of suggestions for future trips—extend it to at least three full days, and advise everyone to get a good NYC map and study it before leaving home!"

"... Abner and Anne's understanding and guidance made the exposure to modern art a great experience for both of us. The chance to experience it with other GC friends was a bonus ... there was freedom to chat with others in the group, at the hotel, and en route to museums. The Sunday brunch did involve time that could have been used for another gallery ... we loved this chance to be in touch with our "roots" ... How about a music or theater weekend next?"

"... our weekend in New York was an unforgettable experience. We feel renewed, regenerated. Neither of us had been in an art museum since 'way back ... so the gallery tour was like shaking hands with an old friend and catching up on a faltering friendship ... let's do it again."

"... it opened up new worlds to me, after many years in science."

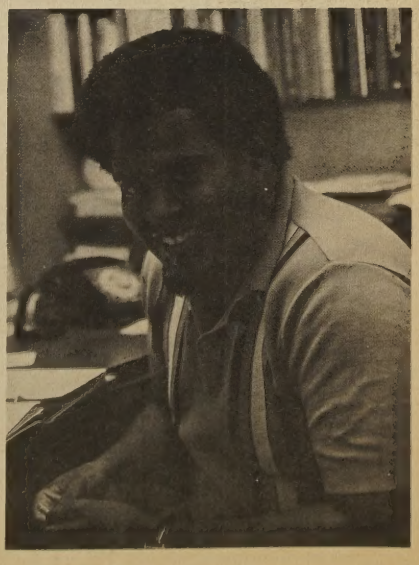
New Members Join Alumni Board

At the October 14 meeting newly elected members joined the GC Alumni Association Board. New members are, from left, Anne Harnish Weaver '58, Irene H. Hershberger '47, Willard H. Albrecht '54, and John E. Lehman '39, president-elect. Stanley Boyer '58 began his term as Board president, while Leanne Schertz '58 continues with the Board as past president. At their next meeting, in late January, Board members will review and plan on- and -off campus events for alumni, the annual fund, student relations, and alumni involvement in student recruitment. (Photo by Janice Martin.)



Also new on the Board is Leamon Sowell '77, who was not able to attend the October meeting. Leamon will stay close to campus life through his new position as half-time director of GC's cross-cultural center. He also works with Mennonite Board of Education, where he directs the High Aim program. (Mike Yoder photo.)

If You Were In One Of The Classes From 1970 To 1977 . . .

These Photographs Are For You

Remember the letter you got in October about the special annual fund for the classes of 1970 through 1977? Here is the first major project from that fund —new furniture for the snack shop lounge area. These photos were taken the day the new furniture was delivered (at a timely moment—just before alumni weekend!). The indoor trees were "planted" several weeks later in their ceramic pots made by Lynn Lais. New draperies are due any day.

The special fund works like this:

* A family in Ohio will donate up to $25,000
* to match increased giving by recent grads, members of the classes of 1970 to 1977. The dollar-for-dollar "match" applies to any first-time gift or any increase over last year's gift. (In case you gave before, but missed last year, your total gift this year is matched too.)

The goal is to raise $50,000 through this special fund to renovate (and create some new areas for)informal social life on campus. Next priority after the snack shop area is the public lounge and recreation area on the first floor of Yoder. Plans for this area include a wood-burning stove.

Concern for "comfortable fun places on campus" is a tired refrain at GC.

Join the chorus, members of the '70 to '77 classes, and help to change the tune!

Faculty News

RUTH GUNDEN recently completed a three-year term of office with the National Association for Girls and Women in Sports (NAGWS). During this time she coordinated Guides for four publications: Aquatics, Basketball-Volleyball, Softball, and Gymnastics. PHILIP CLEMENS has been elected dean of the newly formed Elkhart Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. MARY OYER has been appointed chairperson of the research committee of the Hymn Society of America. With the support of Goshen Hospital and the Elkhart County Medical Association, JOHN INGOLD has organized a community-oriented adult physical fitness program on campus this fall. ERVIN BECK has become a member of the Mennonite Publication Board. CATHERINE MUMAW served on a panel on "The Role of Home Economists in International Programs" at the International Section of the American Home Economics Association meeting in Washington, D.C., Nov. 11. ABNER HERSHBERGER exhibited recent paintings and prints in the Goshen College gallery Oct. 7 through 30. HERSHBERGER, MARVIN BARTEL, JUDY WENIG-HORSWELL, ALTA HERTZLER, EDNA SHANTZ, and JIM RAYMO are showing work in a faculty exhibition at GC Dec. 4 through 21. DAVID HARLEY was appointed program chairperson for the '78 Spring Annual Meeting of the Indiana Association for Social Work Education in Indianapolis.

Alum Gives First Wyse Lecture

Linda Dee Meyers, GC Cass of '68, presented "Nutrition in Two Worlds: Issues and Implications" as the first Olive G. Wyse Honor Lecture on October 6.

Presently a research assistant and scientist at the National Center for Health Statistics, Hyattsville, Maryland, Mrs. Meyers earned a master's degree in nutrition education from Colorado State University. She is a Ph.D. candidate at Cornell University.

"Our awareness of the complexity of nutritional problems has evolved slowly," Mrs. Meyers said. She pointed out that major issues have now been identified; one of them is malnutrition. Far too many people, world-wide, receive insufficient food or an improper balance of nutrients. According to a study published recently by the National Academy of Sciences, reasons for malnutrition include lack of resources with which to buy or produce food; inadequate income; unemployment; and lack of policies, institutions and programs to use available food supplies efficiently for improving nutrition. To eliminate malnutrition, the National Academy study suggested four major tasks:

1. Increase food supply.
2. Reduce poverty.
3. Stabilize food supplies through establishing government policies and setting up food reserves.
4. Slow the rate of world population growth.

Mrs. Meyers added two more tasks:

5. Increase the available food for specific groups like infants, preschool children, and nursing mothers.
6. Set up a mechanism to assess, monitor, and screen populations to discover who is malnourished, how many persons receive adequate food, etc.

Mrs. Meyers concluded that the need is great for more research into the food habits of specific groups of people in specific countries; for educational programs to make people aware of international nutrition issues; and for more informed public policy decisions about ways to relieve malnutrition. The Olive G. Wyse Honor Lectureship was established by home ec alumni and friends in recognition of Dr. Wyse's fifty years of service to the profession of home economics and to Goshen College.

From Jon Beachy '72. . . . Asunción, Paraguay

Ruth, Lisa and Jon Beachy

In July, 1973, we came to Paraguay. For two years we worked at a general hospital in Asunción, the capitol. Ruth worked in a variety of places, mainly in a very active outpatient department. I worked as librarian and teacher in a nursing school, plus helping the administrator with translation of letters or other bi-lingual work. Since February of '75 we've been located in the interior, working in a small clinic.

The clinic is located in the "heart of beautiful downtown Makthlawarya," a Lengua Indian village of nearly 4000 people. Although a doctor is part of our team (we "service" an area over 20,000 sq. km.), I often end up working as a nurse practitioner. We see a lot of people with TB and lots of children with malnutrition and anemia.

I'm working on developing a nutritional supplement using peanuts, since they are already acceptable in the diet. If any of you have access to materials on nutrition in third world countries—especially perspectives on peanuts — I'd be very glad to hear from you. (Perhaps I should write to Jimmy Carter!!)

Ruth has been full-time mother and wife since we're in the interior. Lisa was born April, 1975. Since our arrival here, we've really "moved up" from monthly mail service to weekly or bi-weekly. I recently built a hot running water system, using an empty oil barrel and water pump. It's hot only in summer, but it is nice to have running water. Our nearest town is 2½ hours away (if it hasn't rained).

We'd love to hear from any of you—mail is always very welcome! We are working with an Anglican Mission as Overseas Mission Associates with Mennonite Board of Missions (Elkhart).

Hospitals In Nepal

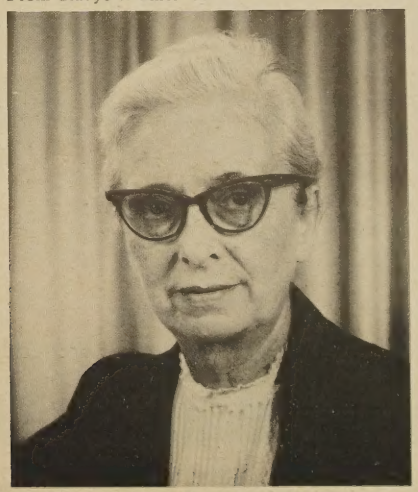
Stan and Marilyn Kamp with their two oldest children

My wife Marilyn, our four children Jyoti - 10, Todd - 8, Sarah - 5, Timmy - 4, and I are in our second term of service with the Mennonite Board of Missions. Through the United Mission to Nepal we are seconded to International Nepal Fellowship. This group is presently working with His Majesty's Government of Nepal in leprosy control work. We are building hospitals and clinics for the program. We have just finished the rainy season. We hope to soon start another leprosy clinic building here in Baghng where we have been living for the past year. We hope to teach all the children through correspondence. As you can see, we both have our hands full!

Church Growth In Puerto Rico

From Gladys Widmer '42



Gladys Widmer

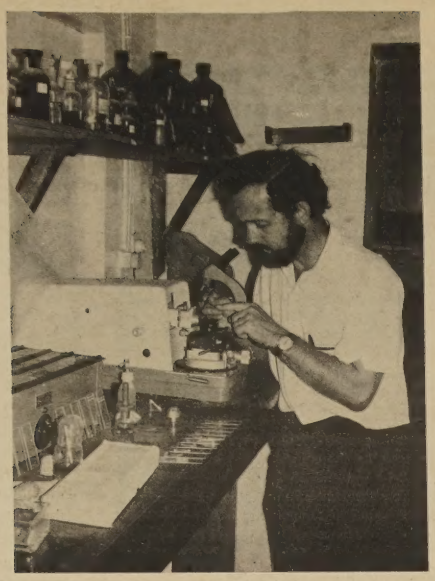
In August I had a vacation on a mount overlooking the western bay of Bouqueron. The return route over the picturesque mountains of the central range of Mayaguez to Aibonito was a relief from the hot summer days of the coast and a foretaste of the cool winter soon to come. This change brings the constant threat of hurricanes, but also blessings of rain!

The cane fields which separated our urbanization from the rest of the city are gradually being replaced with homes. Thus responsibility is growing! Since we are the only evangelical church in the area the task looks big.

My responsibility changes as the members grow to maturity. In March Eliu Rodriguez was chosen as lay pastor. We are also grateful for teachers being raised up so that Bible teaching can be carried on —five classes on Sundays, summer Bible school, and a beginning of the "Good News Club," the Bible hour held in carports in different sections for five days at a time. Also, two ladies' Bible study groups are being held. We are praying that the Tuesday night Bible study can be repeated during the day, so that those working on night shifts in the petroleum industries can also be reached.

Histology In Nigeria

From Henry Troyer. . . . Zaria, Nigeria



Henry Troyer in his Nigeria laboratory

The occasional biology "Newsletter" makes me feel that the school and department from which I graduated is alive and active with academic interests. With the financial squeeze, it would be easy to eliminate certain "non-essential" activities. I admire the biology department for carrying on research activities; I know that this stimulates students in their subject matter in a way that is not otherwise possible.

I am on the Faculty of Medicine of Ahmadu Bello University, serving under MCC. I teach histology to the first and second year medical students and lecture in the post-grad medical course. My wife Elsie teaches religious knowledge (Bible) at a local British school. We are involved at St. Andrew's (Anglican) Church. Elsie teaches Sunday School and I occasionally preach at the evening service. Our children, aged 10, 7 and 6, attend a missionary school at Miango, about 160 miles from here. We do a lot of gardening, specializing in bananas, sweet potatoes and okra. We also raise rabbits for meat for ourselves.

During our USA vacation this summer I spent several days in libraries in Cleveland and at Kent State University and nearly three weeks at West Virginia University Medical Center Library. The purpose was to complete a manuscript (which I didn't get completed) for a textbook on histochemistry (which may therefore never get published).

On our return trip to Nigeria, we first went to Tel Aviv, Israel, where I attended the Third International Symposium on the Teaching of Morphological Sciences. After the Symposium we toured Israel. We were deeply impressed with the agricultural, scientific and industrial development of the country.

Silver Anniversary, Class Of '52

New at this year's Alumni Weekend was the two-day gathering of the GC class celebrating their 25th anniversary year. The Class of '52 met at the Goshen Holiday Inn Friday evening, had lunch together there Saturday, gathered informally around the swimming pool, talked into the wee hours, worshipped and brunched together Sunday. Class members sandwiched in alumni events on campus as well.

Responses of class members indicate their enthusiasm for the weekend happening.

After introductions and updating on class members' career activities: "There must be something to that 'Culture for Service' thing—we seem to have gotten some kind of message!" "It's uncanny the way we can pick up where we left off after college or the last reunion . . ."

A wife's comment over a late-night cup of coffee: "It's been a long time since I heard you laugh that hard!"

After President Burkholder's Sunday morning reflections on the State of the Church: "That was Burkholder at his best . . . in terrific form." "Now I understand some things that are going on in our congregation back home." "Unusually good—things I had heard before come together in a new way." Someone who could be with the class only for the Saturday noon meal commented on the different reunion "feel"—more relaxed, more in-depth conversations as class members spent a longer period of time together.

Class member John Bixler put it this way: "I can be only positive in regard to the alumni weekend . . . we enjoyed the immense fellowship, but especially enjoyed not having the days so jam-packed that we had no time to live. Highlights were the Sunday morning service with JLB and the music after the alumni banquet Saturday night."

The planning committee for the event included George Mark, chairman, J. R. and Sue Burkholder, Ruth Gunden, and Maxine Schrock Miller.

AN ALUM SAID IT . . .

Twenty-five years! I form mental images of my classmates in 1952 and I wonder if I'll be embarrassed because I can't recall a name. The years have passed so fast and have been fantastically good to me. How about my classmates? What experiences—joys or sorrows—can they share?

We meet and mingle—I find we all seem to have weathered the years rather well. We share thoughts on the good life Sunday morning but it is obvious we need to spend much more time together before we can really open up.

The next 25 years? Who knows! Who cares! We'll live a day at a time. Maybe we should meet every five years. . . .

Phase 3—
Ready to top off

Construction workers have run into some delays in making this "vision of the future" a reality. By now, however, installation of wiring, ducts, and outlets is complete; catwalks enabled workers to enclose the top of the building; and the interior has heat. Project representative Harold Brooks expects the Center to be finished by early summer.
